600 Feared Dead As Floods Break Big Dam in Italy

Rushing Water Entraps Hundreds in Homes Near Alessandria.

Roar Like Thunder Their Only Alarm

Rescue Forces Hampered With Electric Plant Out of Commission.

By the Associated Press.

Turin, Italy, Aug. 13.—Estimates that more than 600 persons—possibly 1,000—may have perished in the bursting of a hydro-electric dam in the vicinity of the Alessandrian town of Ovada were made tonight by rescue workers.

The raging waters, pouring through the shattered dam on the swollen Orba River, laid waste an area of 43 square miles in the vicinity of Ovada, today.

A vast volume of water, stored up by mountain storms, swept over the countryside, washing away scores of homes, wiping out small fatcories and crumbling a half dozen railroad and highway bridges.

The rescue workers, troops and police, who were rushed with supplies to the stricken area from the City of Allessandria, said they could compute no definite toll of the dead until daylight.

Scores of injured were given emergency treatment at hospitals and first-aid stations and others, made homeless by flood, spent the night in makeshift shelters.

Towns Left in Darkness.

Destruction of the hydro-electric power station at the dam threw the area into darkness, adding to the havoc. Power service over a wide area was disrupted.

The catastrophe descended on the hapless countryside with tragic suddenness. The first warning was a terrific roar like that of thunder rolling in the surrounding mountains as the dam collapsed.

Then a great wall of water rolled down from the river, engulfing towns and villages. First reports said 100 inhabitants were drowned in Ovada alone—a town of about 10,000.

In the absence of more definite information, police tentatively placed the number of homes destroyed at "more than 100," and said scores of others were wrecked beyond hope of repair.

Inhabitants of Ovada and the neighboring villages of Rocca Grimalda, Casalto and Cermelli fled before the sudden wall of water. Scores were homeless and although the waters were receding tonight, they sought shelter in the open.

Rainstorm Blamed.

A terrific storm that broke over the surrounding mountain area, swelling the waters of the River Obra, was blamed for the disaster.

The only warning to the unsuspecting countryside that the dike had broken was a terrific detonation, which the townspeople took for a thunderclap.

The dike, erected three years ago across the river for the maintenance of a hydro-electric station, impounded the waters for a lake about 6 miles in length.

An area approximately 25 miles long and 2 miles wide was inundated by the collapse to an average depth of 5 yards.

Bodies of humans, carcasses of animals and debris from wrecked dwellings could be seen in the powerful current.

Many clung desperately to the roofs of their houses, waving frantically for help until their homes collapsed beneath them.

One railroad bridge was washed out only eight minutes after a passenger train had passed over it and three other bridges were destroyed.

Victims Mostly Women.

The victims were mostly women and children who were trapped in their homes at the time of the disaster. Scores of injured inhabitants were rescued and taken to the hospital at Ovada.

Several small factories, including a cotton mill, were wiped out.

Large numbers of troops and police, along with supplies and blankets, were sent to the flooded sections from Alessandria, the nearest large city. The troops made up a battalion of engineers.

The dam, about 65 yards long, was erected by the Genoa Electric Co. and impounded about 25,000,000 cubic yards of water.

In San Francisco, on his way to England, William Henry Ambrose, deportee and one-time dope peddler, was telling about Alcatraz . . . About the Devils Island of the Pacific, hoosegow of the incorrigibles, hell hole of the damned . . . Al Capone's home . . . Home also of the country's most hardened criminals . . . Where they go to expiate their sins . . . In silence . . . In silence as deep as a death . . . "The hopelessness gets you," he said. "Capone feels it . . . Everybody does . . . At Alcatraz" . . . Except on Saturday in the exercise pen, when they have a chance, for a little more than two hours, to talk to their fellow human beings . . . "It's as near escape-proof as it could be," he said, sadly, this man of experience, this man who ought to know . . . "It's a devil's island, all right" . . . And in Washington Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee heard from a reporter's lips the complaints of William Henry Ambrose, the man who hated the silence . . . And he said . . . U. S. Rivets Eyes on Talk Of 3 Powers

Embassy to Report Upon Steps at Paris Parley to Avert Clash.

Interest in War Crisis Spurred as Ethiopia Hints Concessions.

By the United Press.

Paris, Aug. 13.—The United States will maintain close contact with impending tri-power negotiations to avert war in East Africa, the American Embassy indicated today.

American interest in the threat of war between Italy and Ethiopia increased after Tecla Hawariat, Ethiopian minister to France, told diplomats Emperor Haile Selassie would rather grant concessions to "friendly" powers than to Italy, who is demanding them.

United State officials made it clear they can not participate in peace negotiations among Italy, Britain and France, opening Friday, because Washington was not a signatory to the 1906 treaty guaranteeing Ethiopia's sovereignty.

The embassy, however, in the absence of Ambassador Jesse I. Strauss, will report fully to Washington daily on its efforts to maintain contact with the British delegation, the French foreign office and the Italian delegates.

Talk Tomorrow.

Premier Pierre Laval, who will confer tomorrow with the British secretary for League of Nations affairs, Capt. R. Anthony Eden, talked with Hawariat today.

Hawariat said Emperor Haile Selassie would refuse to grant exclusive economic advantages to any single power.

"We intend to apply the policy of the 'open door' to all nations," he said. "We cannot refuse to grant to friends what those who menace us demand."

Eden is en route to Paris with Sir Robert Van Sittart, British undersecretary for foreign affairs, and Geoffrey Thompson, foreign office expert on Ethiopia.

Before leaving London, Van Sittart admitted the outlook is "dismal."

He is expected to maintain close contact with the United States embassy in behalf of Britain. He indicated that the most the tri-power negotiators can hope for is compromise.

Britain's Negro possessions will be a definite factor in determining British policy in the discussions.

Egypt Would Aid.

Egyptian Nationalists are co-operating freely with Britain to resist Italy's aims, Egypt declared its willingness to send regiments to cooperate with Britain on the Sudan frontier, because it does not want another great power to occupy a large part of Africa.

Another factor shaping British policy is that if Italy conquers Ethiopia there is fear Italy may attempt to revive the glories of the Roman Empire at the possible price of war with Britain. The acquisition of Ethiopia would give Italy an excuse for erecting a naval base in the Red Sea—a menace to the British route to India and the Far East.

Premier Benito Mussolini has two trump cards which it is believed he will play to obtain France's strict neutrality.

1. Refusal to sign the military defense accords which France's chief of staff, Gen. Gamelin, completed with the Italian high command during his recent visit to Rome.

2. Revival of Italy's support for revisionist nations whose claims Il Duce abandoned in favor of an expansionist policy in Africa.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 13.—Lord Cecil, former undersecretary for foreign affairs, said today "only plain speaking can save us from a repetition of the fateful blunders of 20 years ago."

"We (England) must tell Italy in plain, decisive words we are not bluffing and that we are ready to carry out our solemn obligations to the League Covenant no matter how drastic an action may be required," he asserted.

"Our path is clear and first England must exercise economic and

Senate Plans Quick Vote On Tax Bill

Opposition Is Minor, Adjournment Seen by Aug. 24.

Guffey Coal Bill, Utility Measure May Be Abandoned.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate's $250,000,000 tax bill, with its high imposts on corporate business and incomes of the wealthy few, last night was cast by leaders as the one master key that will unlock the doors of Congress for early adjournment.

Received by the Senate yesterday with a modicum of Republican protests, the measure was made the chamber's unfinished business. Senate passage by Saturday became the leadership goal. Adjournment by or before August 24 is the present objective.

"When the tax bill is passed, and a conference agreement is reached between House and Senate, it is my idea to sound the adjournment gong and get out of here," Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson told reporters.

In another important quarter it was learned that even the Administration's much-wanted Guffey coal-control bill and the utility holding company "death sentence" measure now in conference are slated to go by the board if they stand in the path of adjournment.

Salvaged along with taxes from the legislative tangle, leaders hope to rescue the banking and TVA bills now in conference, such other Administration measures as the gold-clause bill now on its way to conference, the FACA bill approved yesterday by the Senate, and the AAA conference report, partially approved yesterday by the House.

Republicans Hold Aloof.

"Of course, if there is any determined filibuster on the tax bill, we may have to meet at night. But from what I know of the opposition, I don't think that will be necessary."

In one prominent Republican quarter it was said Senate Republicans are being urged to have no part at all in "perfecting" a measure which they hold has been irregularly offered and framed without adequate consideration. The minority, it was said, will oppose the general philosophy of the bill, but offer few amendments.

This does not mean there will not be a lively fight on the bill, with strong and concerted opposition to such features as the proposed graded tax on corporate incomes, and average 2 per cent tax on intercorporate dividends, and the proposed surtaxes on incomes of more than $1,000,000.

Roosevelt Influence.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delaware, said yesterday he would have nothing to do with the measure, aside from stating his general opposition, and casting his vote on various tax proposals.

He drew the inference that President Roosevelt himself was instrumental in the reversal executed by the Senate Finance Committee Monday, when it discarded the La Follette low-bracket surtaxes, and rewrote the bill in line with Administration views.

On the Democratic side of the (Democrat), Tennessee, took the aisle, Senator Kenneth McKellar floor to denounce labeling of the Administration bill a "wealth-sharing" device. He called the label "poppycock."

"On the contrary," McKellar in-

Hopson Dodging Senate's Subpena Server

House Employes, Sleuths Accused

Utility Magnate Slips Away After Session Before Committee.

By Felix Bruner.

The utility lobby investigation turned yesterday afternoon to an inquiry by the Senate Lobby Committee into the manner in which Howard C. Hopson, utilities magnate, escaped service of a Senate subpena after testifying before the House Rules Committee.

The Senate committee was considering contempt citations as charges were made that Hopson was aided in his escape from the old House Office Building to a taxicab at noon yesterday by employes of the House committee and Washington city detectives.

J. P. McCarthy, who attempted to serve the Senate subpena, testified he was forcibly prevented from doing so, as Hopson, with a guard of detectives, Capitol police and Rules Committee investigators pushed into an elevator and then ran for a taxicab.

Once more the whereabouts of the man reputated to control the great Associated Gas & Electric System are unknown. Wanted by both the House and Senate investigating committees, he appeared before the House committee for two hours, and then, in spite of his 225 pounds, vanished. He previously had been sought for more than two weeks.

O'Connor Queries Him.

Before the House Committee Chairman John J. O'Connor, whose brother, Basil O'Connor, according to previous testimony, received $25,000 as an attorney for Hopson's company, conducted the investigation. He went into grea detail concerning the history of the utility companies, but he did not go into details about lobbying activities nor about where Hopson had been during the days he was dodging summonses from both committees. Hopson was instructed to remain on call, but there was no information as to where he would remain nor when he would be called.

Questions asked by Chairman Black and other members of the Senate committee plainly indicated their belief that Hopson's escape was aided by committee employes and that it had been carefully "framed" so that he would not be compelled to appear before the Senate committee.

The Senate has summoned as its next witness W. A. Hill, of Boston, Hopson's attorney, who, according to testimony told McCarthy that he could not serve a summons on Hopson and helped to prevent the service.

The manner in which Hopson was brought before the House committee remained as mysterious as all his other movements. O'Connor declined to explain how the witness had been found, but testimony before the Senate committee indicated that the Rules chairman knew the details of his arrival even to the door at which his taxicab would stop and that guards had been stationed "to protect him from the crowds."

McCarthy's Story.

McCarthy was the first witness before the Senate committee and the investigation into Hopson's escape was started. He said he had a subpena to serve on Hopson.

"Did you attempt to serve it?" Black asked.

"Yes, at the close of the House hearing," McCarthy replied. "I tried to serve it in the lobby of the old House Office Building. As Hopkins left the caucus room I took hold of his arm and said:

"'Mr. Hopson, I am with the Senate committee and have a subpena.'

"Hopson rushed ahead muttering 'No, no, no.'

"One of the men who was with him took hold of my arm and pulled me away."

McCarthy identified one of the men as Hill, but said he did not know the identity of the other. He said he asked Hill if he "was going

On Relief, He Flips $100 Bill in Court

Baltimore, Aug. 13 (AP).—When Edward L. Smith, Negro relief client, was fined $5 in police court today for striking his wife, he almost broke up court proceedings by flipping a $100 bill to the desk sergeant.

The sergeant, fingering the bill in amazement, asked Smith where he obtained such a large sum, when he and his wife are on the city relief rolls.

"From my pastor," Smith replied, but refused to identify the clergyman.

The sergeant made a note to report the incident to relief authorities and sent a squad car around to a bank to get change.

War Pensions Bill Is Signed By President

Adds 45 Million to Budget; Not a 'Precedent' for World War Veterans.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Sweeping away the last major savings effected by the generally praised 1933 economy act, President Roosevelt yesterday caused widespread surprise by signing a bill restoring all pension benefits to veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Boxer rebellion and the Philippine insurrection.

It had been believed generally that the President would veto the bill because of several consultations with Vterans' Administrator Frank T. Hines and Daniel Bell, acting director of the budget, and because it would add $45,581,000 to the budget, for which no similar revenue provision was made.

Late in the day, the tenth since the bill was presented to him for consideration, the President affixed his signature to the measure. The White House secretariat issued a statement asserting the President wanted it understood his action was not a precedent for pensions for World War veterans.

Distinction Stressed.

The statement said the President made a distinction between legislation relating to veterans of early wars and the World War veterans. Pensions were necessary for the former, it was contended, because of inadequacy of the medical care given to them at the time. Adequate hospitalization, insurance, disability benefits, vocational rehabilitation and even a bonus were provided for the World War veterans, the White House pointed out.

Shortly before the President acted, Gen. Hines announced that some 8,800 additional hospital and domiciliary accommodations and beds would be made available to veterans as the result of a $20,000,000 appropriation contained in the second deficiency appropriation bill signed by the President on Monday.

Hines explained that the appropriation was made necessary by the growing demand for increased accommodations for veterans suffering from mental ailments and the necessity of replacing unuitable ex-

'Lost' Check for $2,000,000 Disrupts California's Relief

Clerk in Washington Blamed for Mailing U. S. Aid Instead of Using Telegraph; Disorders Feared, Police Guard Offices.

United Press Staff Correspondent.

Los Angeles, Aug. 13.—A governmental blunder—the "misplacing" of a check for $2,000,000—tonight plunged southern California's dole relief setup into one of the most frightening situations is has faced during depression.

More than 340,000 men, women and children on relief rolls face a prospect of actual hunger before the week is out because a Federal check for $2,000,000 apparently was "lost in the mails."

Police guard has been thrown around 24 district relief offices in preparation for possible marches of hungry citizens on headquarters. The central disbursing office has been padlocked.

While the pinch has been felt only by 5,000 families in Glendale, Calif., relief officials said the mounting tide of trouble would become overwhelming in another two days.

This much is known:

The draft cleared the Treasury Department in Washington yesterday, an allotment from $10,000,000 Federal funds promised for California relief in August.

It had not arrived at State relief headquarters, in San Francisco, late today. Previously drafts had been cleared and forwarded by telegraph, arriving at their destination within a few hours.

Site Relief Chief Frank Y. McLaughlin said apparently "some clerk, entrusted with a $2,000,000 check, which means bread and butter to more than a quarter of a million people, shoved the letter into the mails."

"This," he said, "is the greatest clerical boner in the history of national relief."

Charles Shottland, assistant relief director, said it "probably will require a month to straighten this out—even if the check arrives this week."

Meanwhile, authorities were concerned about the temper of relief clients, who have shown a disposition to knock on the front door with cudgels in hand when weekly checks do not arrive. Seven quasi-riots have taken place in the last three months, most of them led by red-haired Claire Lee Purdy, self-styled "Joan of Arc" of California's jobless.

Striking Housewives to Appeal Here for Slash in Meat Prices

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 13.—Leaders of the housewives' meat buying strike announced today they will send a delegation to Washington to ask Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, to assist them in obtaining a Nation-wide reduction in meat prices.

A mass meeting was announced for Thursday night, when delegates will be chosen to go to Washington. Another delegation will be elected to interview meat packers in Chicago.

Mrs. Helen Gray, secretary of the central committee against the high cost of living, said the Washington delegation will demand administrative action to bring down meat prices. She said the delegates also will interview Representative John D. Dingell (Democrat), Michigan, because he has asked an investigation of the "meat trust."

The appeal to Washington was approved by Recorder's Judge W. McKay Skillman, who fined a woman meat market picket $35 on conviction of disorderly conduct.

"You people are not going at this in the proper manner," Judge Skillman said. "There is no reason to picket the butcher. He hasn't any control over the price of meat.

"It seems to me the thing to do is to get up a monster petition and send it to the Government."

Schweitzer, Three Women Get Life Terms as Dickinson Killers

By the United Press.

Detroit, Aug. 13.—William Schweitzer and his three women companions tonight were found guilty of first degree murder in the slaying of Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney, nephew of of Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes. Life sentence is mandatory.

The Jackson sisters, Loretta and Florence, and Mrs. Jean Miller fainted and fell to the floor as the jury of six men and six women brought in the verdict.

The courtroom was in an uproar. Defense attorneys jumped to their feet and immediately began making motions for an appeal. Judge John A. Boyne gavelled them to their seats as he attempted to restore order.

Court officers carried the three unconscious women from the room.

"Keep quiet, keep quiet," Judge Boyne shouted.

When a semblance of order had been restored, he announced he would pronounce formal sentence Thursday.

A nurse hurriedly summoned from receiving hospital attended the prostrate female defendants. Schweitzer, the 26-year-old underworld procurer, who planned the robbery and slaying of the attorney with the women, remained quiet, showing no emotion upon learning of the verdict.

The jury foreman announced recommendation of mercy for the Jackson sisters when the verdict was read. Mrs. Miller screamed and fainted just before the foreman disclosed that judicial clemency had been sought for her also. The clemency recommendation has no effect.

The jury deliberated three hours and 54 minutes.

to permit Mr. Hopson to refuse to accept this subpena."

He said Hill replied:

"No, you can't serve him. Hopson is already under subpena from the House and you can't serve a subpena now."

McCarthy said Hopson moved toward the elevator and the crowd around him grew larger. He said a man who he believed was a clerk of the Rules Committee preceded Hopson into the elevator.

"Then Hopson and the man who had pulled me away got in," he continued. "As I attempted to get into the elevator the man pushed me in the chest and the door closed."

McCarthy said he rushed down the stairway just in time to see Hopson approaching a taxicob.

"How did he get to the cab," asked Black.

"He ran."

McCarthy said there must have been five men in the Hopson party, and "they moved solidly."

Subpena in Hand.

The witness said that he had carried the subpena in his hand, anticipating Hopson would take it.

"But I didn't get close enough to hi mto hand it to him," he added.

Paul Y. Anderson, a newspaper correspondent, testified he saw McCarthy try to hand the subpena to Hopson, but that Hill pushed between them, saying, "No, you can't serve him." A "big chap," Anderson said, pushed McCarthy out of the elevator, saying, "Get the hell out of here." He said a Capitol policeman put his arm across the door of the elevator and barred McCarthy.

Anderson testified that he asked the policeman:

"Do you know you are interfering with the serving of a Senate subpena."

He said the policeman replied:

"All I know is that I am following orders of the committee not to let anyone get near Mr. Hopson."

Richard L. Turner, another newspaper man called as a witness, testified McCarthy attempted to serve the subpena and a man warded him off with his arm.

The city detectives, who joined some ten Capitol police and the House investigators as Hopson's guard, were identified as Eugene D. Lambert and Joseph W. Shimon. Both were called immediately before the Senate committee.

Sleuths Testify.

Lambert testified that he went to the hearing because Representative O'Connor had asked for two men from headquarters. He said he and Shimon also had spent 13 hours watching the door of a room at the Shoreham Hotel last week at the request of O'Connor. He said that they were to report to O'Connor if anyone went into the room. He said no one did. He said he did not know for whom he was looking, but that he assumed it was Hopson.

"Did you prevent this gentleman here from serving a subpena?" Black asked, pointing to McCarthy. Lambert denied that he had.

"I didn't have any intructions about a summons," he said. "I was outside when Mr. Hopson came out of the building. I had ordered a cab for Mr. Hopson at the direction of one of Mr. O'Connor's men."

"What were your instructions? Why were you there?" Black asked.

"Mr. O'Connor's man," the detective replied, "told me to have the elevator ready when Mr. Hopson came in the building and to see that he got on all right and wasn't crowded. I had instructions to be there in case there was any disorder. Shimon and I went along with him in the elevator."

"Were you protecting him from the elevator man," Black asked.

"Who was privileged to walk beside Mr. Hopson?"

Told to Call Cab.

Lambert said he stayed in the caucus room during the hearing and that as it neared a close "O'Connor's man" told him to call a taxi for Hopson. He said he also was told to keep the crowd back. He said there wasn't a crowd at the door—only three people. He said Shimon was covering the door and he stood near the taxi. Asked to describe how Hopson and a man who left in the taxi with him departed from the building, he said:

"They ran when they went out. They didn't lose any time."

"What did Mr. Hopson do with his cane?" Black asked.

"He carried it with him."

"Did you ever before have a call to prevent someone from being served with a paper?"

"I didn't have orders like that this time."

"Did you know the Senate Committee wanted Hopson?"

"I understood everybody was looking for him."

Lambert testified that Shimon was a member of the fugitive squad.

"To catch fugitives or to aid fugitives?" Black asked.

Lambert testified that a man from O'Connor's office met Hopson in front of the Capitol and rode with him across the street to the office building.

Shimon said he was one of the men who came down the elevator with Hopson. He said he had to identify himself before he was permitted in the elevator "because a tall man wearing a dark suit had his arm across the door."

"I understood I was to ride down with Hopson," he said.

"Why?" asked Black.

"Darned if I know," said the detective.

Shimon said that he did not see McCarthy trying to serve the subpena. He said he had been told by William A. Collins, Rules Committee attorney, that "O'Connor wanted us to stick around."

Tells of Vigil.

He also described the long vigil at the Shoreham last week. He also told the committee that he had never been assigned to "help a fugitive escape." Black went into details with the witness about whether fugitives usually ran when policemen approached.

The stage was well set as Hopson appeared before the House committee. Microphones had been installed before the witness chair and before the members' seats. Capitol police stood about the big room, which was about half-filled. Eyes turned expectantly toward the door. Hopson was a bit late. Many believed he would not appear. But suddenly his appearance was heralded by the flashing of photographers' bulbs.

Hopson, short, stout, bald, tanned, smiling broadly and swinging a cane, strode through the door. He was accompanied by Hill, who informed the committee that he represented B. B. Robinson, a previous witness.

Hopson said that he lived in Andover, N. J., and that he had been in Florida from January to June of this year.

Long Recital.

Asked if he had followed the progress of the holding company bill, he said he had "kept as active track of what was going on in the utility business" as he was able to do. Asked if he had been in touch with Robinson in connection with the holding company bill, he said:

"I was very eager to have him undertake the work of attempting to defeat the bill."

These were the only references to the alleged lobby, which the committee is charged with investigating.

The remainder of the testimony was a long recital of the history of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. and Hopson's connection with the concern. It was largely a repetition of testimony that already had been presented by other witnesses. He said that he had been identified with the system since 1922, when he and J. I. Manze, president of A. G. & E., had obtained control of a number of properties in New York.

He told how bonds, preferred stock and nonvoting common stock had been sold to the public as the concern grew into on of the country's largest holding companies and how he and Manze had retained control of the voting common stock. He said the company had acquired 198 operating companies and about 300 companies of all kinds.

Hopson, nevertheless, denied he controlled the company. He pointed out that since dividends had been passed holders of Class A stock had been permitted to elect two directors.

"There is not a word of truth in all this hooey that has been spread around by theoretical experts and brain trusters that we own the company," he said.

"As a rule," he said, when asked about retention of voting stock by him and Manze," the public is not interested in voting and when they do have the right they don't exercise it."

"Politically or financially?" he was asked.

"Both."

He said his purpose in acquiring utility properties was in the interest of economies, so that these could be passed on in the form of lower rates and so that dividends and interest can be paid. He said he had received no cash dividends, preferring to take his compensation in the form of stock dividends.

Query "Not Proper."

Hopson answered questions calmly and smilingly until he was asked how much his privately owned companies had received for services rendered.

"I don't think it is proper for these committees to be prying into the personal affairs of individuals," he said.

Attributing the expression "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" to the Constitution, he declared that "some people think that is a lot of hooey, but the individual has a right of privacy in his own affairs."

As the question was pressed he declared, "I don't like these rough inferences." No further attempt was made to compel him to answer the question.

Pressed for details concerning ing the utility business, Hopson said:

"I am not an encyclopedia."

"But I thought you were an expert," said O'Connor.

"I am," Hopson said, "but there are a lot of experts around Washington, but you can't tell who is running some of the departments."

Bulk Sale Out As Liquor Bill Passes Senate

Alcohol Control Measure Sent to Conference Greatly Changed.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday passed the Federal Alcohol Control bill, but precipitated a Senate-House dispute by rejecting a House provision for bulk sale of liquor.

The bill, passed and sent to conference with the House without record vote, also departed from the House measure by proposing an Administration agncy independent of the Treasury Department. The measure was necessitated by the Supreme Court decision ending NRA codes, upon which Federal liquor control had been based.

The Senate Finance Committee's recommendation for eliminating the House bulk sale provision and allowing sale only by bottle was approved 59 to 24.

Voting for bottle sales in preference to barrels were 37 Democrats, 21 Republicans, 1 Progressive. Voting for the House provision for bulk sales were 23 Democrats and 1 Farmer-Labor.

From both camps came declarations that plans of the opposition would foster bootlegging.

"It is easier to adulterate liquor in bulk, in one operation than to carry on the innumerable operations of adulterating in bottles," asserted Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, in charge of the bill.

"I never heard of anybody bootlegging by barrel," was the hot reply of Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, majority leader. Although advised by George that Secretary Morgenthau of the Treasury had pleaded for elimination of barrel sales, Robinson snapped:

"Bootlegging is carried on by bottle."

Despite floor opposition, the bill went to conference with scarcely a change from the form in which the Senate Finance Committee turned it out.

Bulk sales were outlawed, contrary to House wishes.

The administration would be in the hands of an independent commission of three.

Beer and malt liquors would be excluded from the regulatory measures, also conflicting with House language.

Conference committeemen named by the Senate were Harrison, King and George, Democrats; La Follette, Progressive, and Keyes, Republican.

The commission of three to be appointed by the President at salaries of $10,000 each, would have power under the bill to set up fair trade practices, prohibit "tied houses" handling exclusively the product of one manufacturer, and to prohibit misleading branding and advertising.

Kreuger & Toll $150,000 Fee Paid to Davis

By the Associated Press.

An agreement to pay Norman H. Davis, the ambassador-at-large, $150,000 for heading an international protective committee on Kreuger & Toll securities was disclosed yesterday in testimony made public by the securities commission.

This sum was to be paid in 1933 and 1934 by domestic protective committees out of $310,000 contributed by New York banks which had underwritten securities sold by the late Ivar Kreuger, Swedish financier.

Whether any sum actually was paid Davis was not revealed. The Roosevelt ambassador did not appear personally.

The testimony was made public together with a commission announcement that it had completed its investigation of the reorganization of Kreuger & Toll. This reorganization was undertaken after Kreuger killed himself and his international financial empire crashed amid disclosures of bookkeeping falsifications and embezzlements. The commission later will make recommendations to Congress.

The purpose of the Davis international committee was to correlate the work of Kreuger protective committees of various kinds.

Testimony of John Foster Dulles, New York attorney and counsel for the Murphy Protective Committee, said the bankers who contributed the $310,000 included Lee, Higginson & Co., the Guaranty Co. and the National City Co.

Questioned Repeatedly.

Commission counsel questioned him repeatedly about the bankers' support, which was described as "very unusual." Dulles said the bankers felt they had a "moral obligation."

The agreement was that he would receive $75,000 as a flat fee and $75,000 additional if he brought to a successful conclusion the work of liquidating the securities in behalf of the investors. Davis did not testify and the record did not show whether he still heads the international committee. The reorganization of Kreuger & Toll Securities has not been completed.

The Davis committee was formed through two other committees. The first was to protect the holders of Kreuger & Toll Security debentures. It was headed by Grayson M.-P. Murphy, New York financier. The second committee was to protect debenture holders of International Match Co., Kreuger's subsidiary.

They Paid $170,000.

A first payment of $170,000 was made by the three banks on May 11, 1933, and it was publicly announced on January 6, 1934, that the bankers were contributing to the support of the protective committees. Commission counsel, noting the intervening period from the contribution and the announcement, asked for an explanation and Dulles said:

"There was a lapse of about seven months between the date we got the money and the date the Davis committee was able to function. Mr. Davis had been delayed by his public work as a disarmament representative abroad and his activities were to a considerable extent superseded and there was no public announcement that could be made as to the function of Davis' committee until January, 1934."

The bankers made a second contribution of $100,000 in July, 1934, making a total of $270,000 which was contributed to the support of the Davis committee. The additional $40,000 to make the total of $310,000, which was contributed by the bankers, went to other protective committees.

Curley Defends Massachusetts In Nazi Rebuke

By the United Press.

Boston, Aug. 13.—Gov. James M. Curley, replying to a formal protest by the German Consul at Boston, declared late today that a Massachusetts House of Representatives resolution condemning "abhorrent" Nazi persecutions was "an honest and open expression of the secret opinion of Americans generally."

Besides reporting yesterday's House resolution to Dr. Hans Luther, the German Ambassador, the Consul, Baron Kurt von Tippelskirch, today protested to House Speaker Leverett Saltonstall against "unwarranted and unpardonable interference" in German affairs. A copy of the note was sent to Curley as a matter of courtesy.

Saltonstall in a brief reply defended the resolution as an expression of opinion of a group of Massachusetts citizens on a matter of world-wide interest. But Gov. Curley, besides defending the right of the House to take such action, strongly defended the substance of the resolution. He said, in part:

Curley Statement.

"Personally," I do not find myself in accord with you in your views with reference to the action as taken by the General Court of Massachusetts, believing as I do that the protest is timely and represents an honest and open expression of the secret opinion of Americans generally.

"Massachusetts, from the beginning of our Government, has been regarded as one place in the world in which the public could assemble and give honest expression to what they rightly regarded as oppression or persecution upon the part of any nation of the world.

"As to the merits of the case, I am quite certain that the action taken by the Legislature of Massachusetts is but a formal expression of the opinion of the public as a whole.

"I judge from your communication that you are of the opinion that the resolution as adopted may prove injurious to the Government which you represent and to this view I can not subscribe, since history teaches that persecution and oppression beget persecution and oppression, and in my opinion the adoption of the resolution may serve a dual purpose; first, in ending persecution and oppression and, secondly, in emphasizing in no uncertain terms that a pursuance of the program that has been followed during the past year by the Nazi government is abhorrent to right-thinking men and women the world over and not in keeping with the spirit of the times and must inevitably work greater injury to its proponents than to those against whom the persecution and oppression is directed."

Consul Resents Action.

While the matter was arousing a tempest in Boston, it had been indicated at Washington that the German Embassy might pigeon-hole it as a mere expression of opinion. Whether Gov. Curley's strongly worded letter would alter the situation was a matter for speculation.

In any event, Von Tippelskirch will inform his embassy of this latest development, which he considers "a breach of courtesy."

The Consul said tonight that he considered it discourteous on the Governor's part to make public his letter before it could possibly have reached him. Furthermore, said Von Tippelskirch, his formal protest was made to the House Speaker, a copy being sent Curley as a matter of diplomatic courtesy.

"I merely wanted to keep the Governor informed of my step," said the Consul, implying that he considered Curley's action an intrusion.

Jews Take Up Fight.

Center of the controversy was the resolution introduced by Thomas Dorgan and Albert E. Morris, representatives from Boston and Everett districts having substantial Jewish and Catholic populations, and adopted by House acclamation yesterday. It read:

"Whereas it is reliably reported that certain inhabitants of Germany are being persecuted on account of their religious faith and nationally to an extent abhorrent to modern civilization.

"Therefore be it resolved that the House of Representatives of the General Court of Massachusetts affirms its conviction and belief that freedom and equality of mankind, regardless of race, color or creed, is indispensable to the maintenance of any modern civilization and views with alarm any violation of these sacred principles."

Leaders of Boston's Jewry took advantage of the exchange to pen a lengthy open letter to Von Tippelskirch asking him to "remember what your kinsmen across the seas are doing to the land of Goethe, Schiller, Kant and Mendelssohn."

Signed by Samuel Kalesky, president of the American Jewish Congress; Leon Arkin, chairman of the Jewish labor committee, and Rabbi Joseph S. Shubow, secretary of the Jewish joint committee, the letter asked, "Is it the criminal, the murderer, the kidnaper, he who is guilty of arson and all the other criminal acts with which Naziism has become identified in the mind of the world's civilization, who is to be held blameworthy, or is it those whose sensibilities are shocked by such conduct and expresses his resentment and condemnation?"

Cartoon Copies Bought.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Aug. 13.—The Japanese Embassy sought today to keep the August number of Vanity Fair from circulating here in protest against a cartoon in the magazine which the Japanese insist is an affront to their Emperor.

They approached newsdealers offering to buy all copies of the magazine, due here shortly. The dealers said they would sell to anyone with cash.

"We are buying all the copies we can," said the Japanese. "We don t want that objectionable cartoon circulating here."

Selection of Adena Miller Rich to succeed the late Jane Addams as president of Hull House, famous Chicago welfare unit, was announced last night by Clarence E. Carter in behalf of the board of trustees.

Mrs. Rich is the wife of a Chicago stock broker, but has lived at Hull House for 20 years.

Miss Addams, who founded the settlement 55 years ago, rallied and lived until May 21 of this year. Her preference was respected by the organization.

Grace Abbott, former head of the Labor Department's Children's Bureau, will succeed Mrs. Rich as first vice president.

Foreigners May Visit Texas at Centennial

By the United Press.

The State Department is considering a plan to invite representatives of foreign nations to attend the Texas Centennial celebration next year, it was learned last night. Such a plan has been submitted by Gov. James Allfred and will be acted upon this morning at a meeting between Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, Vice President John N. Garner and two centennial commissioners, Maj. Paul L. Wakefield and Percy Rice.

Roper was named to represent the Federal Government on the Texas commission when Congress appropriated $3,000,000 as the Government's contribution.

Shoshone Forest Fire Reported Controlled

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 13 (AP).—Flames that devoured more than 10,000 acres of virgin timber in Shoshone National Forest, near the east entrance to Yellowstone Park in Wyoming, were reported virtually under control today.

Four hundred fire-fighters had battled the blaze nearly 72 hours. Forest service officials said the fire, described as the worst of the year, would be subdued shortly unless fresh winds spread it to nearby timbered areas.

Mutilation Trial Set September 9

Date Fixed in Emasculation Killing at Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Mandeville W. Zenge, 26, charged with the emasculation-killing of Dr. Walter J. Bauer, was ordered today to prepare for trial September 9.

Judge John S. Lewe set the trial date and assigned the case to Judge Denis J. Normoyle, criminal court chief justice-elect. Defense Attorneys Joseph R. Roach and Joseph E. Green said they would request a continuance for time to complete thei rcase.

Zenge is accused of mutilating Dr. Bauer with a pocket knufe. Dr. Bauer married Louise Shaffer, pretty superintendent of nurses at the Kirksville (Mo.), Osteophatic Hospital, former fiancee of Zenge. Dr. Bauer was a member of the staff at the hospital.

The doctor, a summer student at the University of Michigan, was found in his automobile the morning of July 31, on Chicago's south side. As he lay dying in a hospital, he named a fellow Ann Arbor Hotel guest as the man who kidnaped him, forced him to drive to Chicago and mutilated him. Zenge was arrested two days later.

Sir William Watson, Victorian Poet, Die

Once Noted English Writer Ends Life in Poverty.

By the Associated Press.

Brighton, England, Aug. 13.—Sir William Watson, 77, last of the Victorian poets, died today, a "forgotten man" who eked out an existence in his later years through a £200 (about $1,000) yearly pension and the generosity of friends.

Lady Watson, who said her husband's last work brought under £10 announced his death with this statement:

"At midnight last night the oldest of the English poets died—Sir William Watson. His wife and daughters were with him. Sir William's long life was spent in devotion to his work in its noblest form. And so passed one deserving of honor."

Burial will be Friday beside the graves of relatives in Liverpool, which Watson in a poem called: "The City of Festering Streets by Misery Trod."

Rudyard Kipling said today of Sir William: "He did magnificent work. He never wrote a bad line. His work has gone to a general account and will not be lost."

U. S. to Follow Tri-Power Talk On War Crisis

diplomatic measures to prevent hostilities. If those fail, we must call on the League members to unite to halt force by force if need be."

Lord Cecil, a leading advocate of peace, earlier expressed his views at a special meeting of the executive committee of the League of Nations Union. The committee adopted a resolution insisting upon collective action by League members to prevent a war between Italy and Ethiopia.

More Troops Sail.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Aug. 13.—Three more ships laden with troops, war materials and workmen sailed for Italy's East African colonies tonight as the government completed arrangements to send its delegation to the tri-power conference in Paris.

Well-informed circles did not disguise the fact Italy does not expect any development in these conversations to retard her military program in East Africa.

Therefore it is expected that Baron Pompeo Aloisi, the Italian delegate, who is due to arrive in Paris Thursday, will listen politely to all suggesions for solution of the Italo-Ethiopian problem advanced by France or England, but in the end will maintain the Italian right—backed by a wealth of judicial argument—to deal with Ethiopia in Italy's own way.

Soviet Initiates Program to Fix Value of Ruble

Prices Lowered, Wages Are Raised in Effort to Stabilize Money.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 13 (AP).—The Soviet government has set its shoulders to the task of giving its freak ruble a fixed purchasing value.

To accomplish this it must make alterations that pierce to the roots of its economic structure. It is a process which cannot be completed in weeks, or even months.

First of all there must be a workable balance between wages and prices on the general market, at present far out of proportion. The government is attacking the problem from both ends, raising incomes o none hand and lowering prices on the other.

Govesides ETAOI ETAO ETAO ET

Just now the ruble—the paper ruble as differing from the "gold" ruble quoted here at 1.13 to the dollar—is an almost indefinable quantity. It may buy a meal and then again it may not even be an acceptable tip.

A box of Soviet-made corn flakes cost 2 rubles on the open market, meat may cost 5 rubes or more a pound. Butter cost 12 rubles a loaf and bread three rubles a loaf.

The average factory worker has a salary of 150 rubles a month. The proportion, if he were obliged to buy in the open market, woulld be the same as if a man making $150 a month in America had to pay $12 a pound for butter and $3 a loaf for bread.

Since this is manifestly impossible, the government maintains special stores or commissaries for workers, where they may buy at prices better adjusted to their incomes.

Incomes in the Soviet Union today vary as they do in other countries, but a man with a large salary may not have access to the special shops, and therefore his rubles may have a smaller purchasing value.

The government's plan is eventually to eliminate the special stores and throw all buying into the open market. When this has been accomplished the ruble will be worth an equal amount to everyone.

Bryan Confronts Recall Movement

By the Associated Press.

Lincoln, Nebr., Aug. 13.—Charles W. Bryan, brother of the great commoner and Mayor of Lincoln, today found himself the victim of one of his favorite political devices—a petition for a recall election.

During his 40 years of active political life, Bryan has been a stanch advocate of the initiative, referendum and recall in State and municipal elections.

Bryan, whose political activities took him into the Nebraska Governor's chair for three terms and into the Democratic vice presidency nomination in 1924, dismissed the recall petitions without definite comment and left early today to visit his son in Minneapolis.

The petitions, seeking to remove Bryan from the office he held once before, asked that Ernest M. Bair, defeated by Bryan at the last city election, be placed on the ballot for mayor.

4 in Car Bearing District Tags Sought by Police in Virginia.

A search for four bandits who kidnaped an East Falls Church, Va., filling station attendant after robbing him of $36.22, is being conducted here by Virginia and District police.

The men, riding in a car bearing District license tags, entered Hietts Filling Station at 3 a. m. yesterday and asked Henry Butler, the attendant, to check the oil.

Then they pulled a gun and forced him to get into the car. They took the day's receipts from the cash drawer.

Warning Butler to be quiet or "be shot," they cut the telephone wires and brought him to the vicinity of Chain Bridge, where he was released.

3 Women Fined $25 For Stripping 4 in Strike

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 13 (AP).—Three women strikers, accused of stripping four women garment workers naked—and spanking them—were fined $25 today and sentenced to three days in prison.

Mae Sealey, Jessie Burgett and Charlotte Duncan were assessed the penalties for contempt of court, the Lorch Manufacturing Co. having obtained an injunction to prevent violence. Zeffa James, a fourth striker, was placed on probation.

The witnesses testified they were disrobed as they approached the Lorch company buildings Wednesday to work. The two said all their clothes except their shoes and stockings were torn off.

Bandits Drink Juleps, Get $3,000 at Inn

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Armed bandits staged two daring holdups today in the metropolitan area, escaping with $5,039 in cash.

Two men, who sipped mint julips at tea time while they studied their surroundings, stole a $3,000 pay roll from the historic Claremont Inn, just north of Grant's Tomb on Riverside Drive.

Five bandits entered a branch office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in Brooklyn, and escaped with $2,039 just 15 minutes before a patrolman arrived to escort the money to a bank.

Tom Mooney's Aged Accuser Tells of Perjury

Baltimorean Testifies He Lied in Identification in Bombing Case.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 13.—An aged, paralyzed man whose testimony in 1917 aided in sending Thomas J. Mooney to prison for life for the preparedness day bombing in San Francisco, today testified under oath that he perjured himself in identifying Mooney as the timer of the bomb which killed 10 persons, injured two score.

The testimony, that of John McDonald, now a patient in Baltimore City Hospital, is the first link of a legal chain which attorneys for Mooney hope will end successfully Mooney's long fight for freedom.

It was taken before a referee named by the California Supreme Court and will be submitted to the court for review before that body passes upon Mooney's petition for writ of habeas corpus. The hearing probably will continue two more days. Points testified to by McDonald today were:

That he testified falsely before a grand jury in identifying Mooney and Warren K. Billings as the men involved in the bombing.

That he told Police Lieut. Charles Goff in 1916 that Mooney was not the man.

That he told the then District Attorney Charles Fickert that he never had seen Mooney before the day he viewed him in jail.

That Fickert instructed him to swear that Mooney and Billings were the two men involved.

That Edward Cunha, assistant district attorney at the time, told him to alter his testimony at the Mooney trial from that given at the Billings trial.

That, after he had told his story to the police, Fickert instructed him to stop selling papers for a living and provided him with a room at the Alpine Hotel in San Francisco and that George Bailey, a police officer, stayed with him constantly.

That he was sent to a ranch near Tracy, Calif., was kept there for five or six weeks, did no work during that time and was paid $3 a day.

That Fickert told him there was a big reward involved and for him to "stick with us and you'll get the biggest cut of the melon."

Today's hearing was before A. E. Shaw, the referee named by the California Supreme Court. William Cleary, deputy attorney general for that State, was present to represent the State and will cross-examine MacDonald when attorneys for Mooney complete their direct examination.

Jersey Execution Of Robber Stayed

Confederate Offers to Take Blame for Murder.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 13.—Gov. Hoffman today granted John Favorito, 25, Edgewater mechanic, a week's reprieve from death in the electric chair. Favorito, convicted of fatally shooting Emil Byborny, 51, Englewood Cliffs gas station proprietor, in a holdup last December, was to have died tonight.

The Governor acted after Col. Mark O. Kimberling, warden of the State prison, told him he had received a letter from Charles Weise, one of the two men tried with Favorito, offering to take the blame for Byborny's death.

Weise is serving 12 to 15 years for his part in the slaying. The third man, William Crum, was acquitted.

Dam Construction Bill Is Reported Favorably

By the Associated Press.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday reported favorably a bill by Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, authorizing expenditure of $1,200,000 for construction of a diversion dam on the New Mexico-Texas border near El Paso as part of the Rio Grande River canalization project.

The measure as originally introduced, provided for $4,000,000 for the entire project to include dam construction and canalization of the river from the Caballo Demsite in New Mexico south to the Diversion Dam.

Florida Canal Backers Still Hoping for Funds

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt's recent denial of a huge appropriation to complete the Florida canal was interpreted by sponsors of the project as a delay to tudy the matter, and not as a positive refusal of funds, it was learned last night.

A delegation of 15 Florida residents, headed by Walter F. Coachman, jr., is in Washington for the purpose of more fully acquainting the President with the purposes and benefits of the canal.

Electric Shock Is Fatal To Nebraska Politician

Ord, Nebr., Aug. 13 (AP).—Marion J. Cushing, 47, Republican house leader in the last Nebraska Legislature, was electrocuted today in a fall against a high-tension power line near his farm home here while repairing his telephone line.

The accident removed from Nebraska politics a man whose legislative career caused many observers to predict he would fill the place of United States Senator George W. Norris, when the veteran Nebraskan retires.

Child Health Aid Fails, Association Disbanded

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Dissolution of the American Child Health Association was voted today by the organization's membership. Accepting the recommendation of its executive committee, the membership held that the association's usefulness virtually had ceased.

The president, Dr. Samuel M. Hamill, of Philadelphia, said there existed too many child health groups with overlapping functions and that the association had failed in efforts to amalgamate them.

President Asks Greater Speed On Work-Relie

Hints of NewCentralization in Conference With His Allotment Group.

By the Associated Press.

Need for greater speed in the work-relief drive was reported to have been stressed by rPesident Roosevelt yesterday at a meeting of his allotment committee.

The President was said authoritatively to have intimated to the committee, which recommended allotment of an additional $103,000,077, including $16,000,000 for another population census, that greater centralization of administration might be necessary to attain the $2,500,000 job peak promised by November 1.

Doubt that more than 90 or 95 per cent would be at work on that date recently was expressed by the President, but Harry L. Hopkins was quick to insist later that the dole would be dicontinued November 1.

Field Men Instructed.

The President's call for speed coincided with a three-day meeting of Works Progress Administration field men, summoned by Hopkins for last minute instructions in oiling up machinery of the agency which is to spend $2,000,000,000 or more of the $4,000,000,000 works appropriation.

The Bureau of the Census, which will carry out the survey of population, occupations and the educational status of youths between 16 nd 25, said a peak of 139,500 persons would be given employment during the 30-day census period. Among those employed would be 25,000 young people whom the National Youth Administration intends to supply with part-time jjobs. The educational survey, it was said, was necessary in carrying out that program.

Headquarters of the census would be in the iDstrict of Columbia and Chicago. An official announcement said "the extensive changes in national life and unprecedented movements of population, since the census of 1930 have rendered the data for that year obsolete for current purposes."

Hopkins Silent.

Meanwhile no reply came from Hopkins to the demand by the American Federation of Labor that works progress construction projects be transferred to the Public Works Administration which pays higher wages. Secretary Ickes said "I don't think any comment from me is necessary," adding that he "doubted" the New York strike against the WPA wage schedule would spread over the rest of the country.

Recommendations by the allotment committee, in addition to $16,000,000 for the census, included $43,209,305 for 2,356 WPA projects in 28 States and the District of Columbia; $7,602,668 to the Works Progress Administration for 775 projects whose locations were not available because they were submitted by Hopkins at the last minute and $24,677,882 for 77 PWA projects, as well as a number of smaller sums for other eFderal agencies.

Davey Granted Parley Today With Roosevelt

White House Silent but a Likely Topis Is Ballot to Fill Truax Post.

Political tongues were set wagging last night when the White House announced that Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio had asked and had been granted an appointment with President Roosevelt for today. The White House secretariat was without knowledge of what Ohio's Governor wished to discuss with the President.

Gov. Davey, however, is the key to one of the most warmly discussed and absorbing political questions of the day. It is whether he will call a special election to fill the vacancy in the House caused by the death of Representative-at-Large Charles V. Truax.

Republicans are keenly anxious for this test of New Deal sentiment throughout Ohio, a pivotal State in presidential elections and typical of hte Middle West. Democrats here have been unenthusiastic for the test, especially in view of what happend to their candidate in the Rhode Island First Congressional District.

"Hasn't Decided."

Gov. Davey, a Democrat, has said he has not determined whether he will call the election. Whatever the purpose of Davey's visit here today, it is almost certain he will discuss political sentiment in his State with the President and possibly the feasibility of holding a State-wide special Congressional election this fall.

One White House attache, disavowing any knowledge of what the Ohio executive wanted to discuss, suggested it might be Federal relief for his State.

lotment Board, meeting at the White House, recommended to the President the allocation of $7,076,000 for 630 projects in Ohio, the second largest allocation recommended yesterday.

Meanwhile reports cropped up again that Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, had been telling colleagues he would seek the Democratic nomination for the Presidency next year and, failing that, would run as an independent for the Presidency. Democratic leaders merely yawned. Long previously has announced his intention to seek the Presidency.

Hoover in New York.

Senator Theodore Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, however, took the Kingfish more seriously in an interview in New Orleans than he is taken by leaders here. According to the Associated Press, Bilbo warned Long to "stay out of Mississippi." Long last week urged the nomination there of Paul Johnson for the governorship, although the latter repudiated the Kingfish's support.

Long retaliated with an announcement that he was withdrawing his activities from the Mississippi gubernatorial race because he had been unable to make it a "Huey Long and Share-Our-Wealth" contest. He said he had notified the officers of his 602 Share-Our-Wealth societies in the State to "take no hand in the Mississippi Governor's race."

Meanwhile, former President Herbert Hoover was in New York consulting informally with Eastern Republican leaders. There was no further reaction here to his challenge that President Roosevelt at once reveal his plans for changing the Constitution.

Among those with whom Hoover conferred yesterday was Theodore Roosevelt, jr. They talked politics in a general way but Roosevelt denied there had been any discussion of candidacies. He declined to reveal his conversations with the Republican party chieftain.

Disaster after disaster has befallen Constantinople, now called Istanbul, since the historic city was founded in 328 A. D. by Constantine the Great. Twenty-six times during its history, the city has been under siege. Many of the attacks were a result of civil wars between rival factions of the empire.

The Avars, Saracens, Bulgarians, forces of the Crusades and Turks have all taken their turn in storming the city. The first great siege was that of the Avars in the early seventh century. A prolonged attack was made by the Saracens 50 years later, followed by another attack in 718. The Bulgarians attacked Constantinople in 813 and again in 913. The fourth Crusade swept out of Europe to assail the ancient city in 1203. Two hundred years later the Turks attacked.

Constantinople was shaken by its first disastrous earthquake in 416, less than a century after its founding. It was visited twice again that century. Fifteen other major quakes have followed.

Fire has swept the city numerous times. Twenty-seven of these disastrous conflagrations have occurred since 1501.

Theodore Craig Retires From Va. Senate Contest

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 13.—Theodore Craig, recently named as a candidate for the Virginia House of Delegates by a dissenting group of Shenandoah County Republicans, withdrew from the race here today. Craig made the following statement in an interview given to a Washington Post representative:

"The nomination was made during my temporary absence from the county, and without giving me an opportunity to express my wishes in the matter. As a teacher in the public schools of the county, I do not feel that I should enter actively into a political campaign which of necessity would interfere with my efficiency as a teacher."

Civil War Veteran Unhurt in Auto Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 13.—Henry Forrer, 90-year-old Confederate veteran, of West Rockingham, experienced a new thrill yesterday and escaped unscratched, as he did in the Civil War.

An automobile, driven by his daughter, Miss Sue Forrer, overturned on the Valley pike near Verona after a tire blew out, but neither the veteran, his daughter nor two companions were hurt. The car landed on its side against a fence after making two turns. The occupants had to be helped out through the windows.

Moffett Held Ready to Quit New Deal Post

FHA Administrator Back From Trip to Discuss Resignation.

James A. Moffett, who is scheduled to return to this country tomorrow from a trip around the world, yesterday was reported reliably to be determined to resign as Federal Housing Administrator as soon as he can discuss the matter with President Roosevelt.

Moffett wanted to resign in May, when he left on his trip around the world but President Roosevelt refused to accept his resignation at that time. Stewart MacDonald was named acting Federal Housing Administrator at Moffett's suggestion. Since he took charge of the organization the daily volume of loans insured by the agency have bounded sharply upward.

In one quarter yesterday it was suggested that the President asked Moffett in May to withhold his resignation until MacDonald could demonstrate his ability to handle the job. Be this as it may, MacDonald is now reported as slated for the job.

New Job Is Seen.

It also was reported that Moffett may be shifted to another New Deal post. Due to Moffett's association with big business, the Administration is anxious to keep him associated with it in some capacity. The President is extremely fond of Moffett.

Meanwhile it was learned that efforts inspired by finance and credit companies are being made to restrict the FHA'S operations in insuring loans for equipmnt purchases under the amendment last May to the FHA act which permitted modernnization loans up to $50,000. This amendment alo permitted insurance of loans on equipment not permanently attached to real estate, such as machinery in industrial plants and refrigerators in homes.

Such loans are eligible for FHA insurance when made on terms not in excess of a 5 per cent discount charge. Although this figures 9.72 annual interest on the money borrowed, which also applies to home modernization loans, it is said to be less than charges made by credit and financ companies.

With the knowledge that such loans can be insured under the FHA and hence involve virtually no risk, banks have been taking this kind of business away from credit and finance companies, it is asserted, and the latter wish to curb FHA activities in that field.

It is reported that an effort is beinb made to take away from FHA's right to insure loans on equipment not permanently attached to real estate by means of an amendment to a section of title 3 of the Eccles banking bill, now in conference.

This provision, which clarifies language in the May FHA amendment raising the limit of modernization loans to $50,000 was added to the bill by the Senate. Thus the conferees may add to or detract from the provision, so long as they adhere to language regarding modernization loans.

William Stanley, former asistant to the Attorney General and now practicing law here, was reported as one of those interested in restricting the FHA's activities in this regard. Stanley yesterday declined to discuss the matter beyond asserting that he had not been retained for such an objective.

New School Planned At Fredericksburg, Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 13.—Erection of a new school building here to cost approximately $100,000 was discussed by the city council last night. The body received a report from the school and finance committees setting forth that the building could be erected with PWA aid at a net saving of $35,000 to the city. It would relieve congestion prevalent in the city schools.

The report did not contain any recommendation for undertaking the project and the council directed that the committee bring in a definite report and recommendation within two weeks. The erection of the school will necessitate an increase in the tax rate of 25 to 30 cents.

Branch Fusion Of Methodists Contemplated

Suggested Merger Would Provide Membership of 7,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Leaders of three branches of Methodism today completed preliminary negotiations for the proposed merger of the Methodist Episcopal Church North, the Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Methodist Protestant Church.

A "plan" committee of 15 spent the day at the North Shore Hotel in suburban Evanston perfecting a constitution to be put before a committee of 45 churchmen tomorrow.

The constitution, if acceptable to the committee and ratified by general conferences of the three denominations, will result in a united church of from 7,000,000 to 8,000,000 members—the largest Protestant body in the United States.

Church leaders expressed confidence the merger would be approved.

"If the merger is not approved at the present meeting it probably never will be," a member of the Southern delegation asserted.

Under the proposed constitution, it was reported, the united church would be divided into six regional conferences, each conference to elect a bishop. Negro churchmen would be given a conference of their own for the first time, reports said.

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of Washington, D. C., a leader of the Northern branch, presided at the preliminary session. He was assisted by Bishop E. D. Mouzon, of Charlotte, N. C., a Southern churchman. Dr. J. C. Broomfield, of Pittsburgh, Pa., headed the Methodist Protestant delegation.

The proposed constitution was drawn up at Louisville, Ky., last February.

If approved, it will be submitted to the general conferences of the Northern and Methodist Protestant churches next May. The Southern church will not hold its next conference until 1938, so the proposed merger could not be consummated before 1939, its proponents said.

Ickes Denies 'Politics' In $37,500,000 Project

By the Associated Press.

Denial of intimations that politics was involved in approval of a $37,500,000 public works allotment for the Santee and Cooper Rivers in South Carolina came yesterday from Secretary Ickes.

Such intimations, published in South Carolina and attributed to an official of the Carolina Power & Light Co. of Raleigh, N. C., were to the effect the proposal was a "campaign fund" to re-elect Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, an Administration spokesman.

Nebraska Farmer on Way Here to Make Issue of HOLC Refusal.

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Nebr., Aug. 13.—H. W. Kendall, of Kearney, Nebr., farmer, packed his clothing and a growing impatience into his model T Ford touring car here today and headed for Washington to make an issue of his failure to obtain a loan from the HOLC.

For three days he had consulted regional HOLC and RFC officials here about his failure to obtain a $3,500 loan on his $8,000 acreage west of Kearney, but today he said he dad received no satisfaction.

"I am going to see every influential official, HOLC officer, and President Roosevelt if necessary, while in Washington and find out why I didn't get the loan," Kendall said.

He said he applied for a loan 18 months ago, but that they turned him down August 1 because his place is called more of a business than a farm. He said he raised 200,000 chickens in his hatchery last year. At the suggestion of HOLC officials, Kendall stated, de moved the hatchery into town at a cost of $700.

He admitted it may take him some time to make the trip in his decrepit automobile, but said he was determined to "shear the red tape."

Labor to Fight Company Unio With New Law

Steel Industry to Be Front in Battle Relying on Wagner Act.

By the United Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 13.—Organized labor will use the Wagner labor disputes law in what may be a showdown with the "company union" plan, William Green, president of the A. F. of L., indicated tonight.

The steel industry will be the battleground.

At the federation's executive council sessions, Green frankly admitted that even by the most favorable count the A. F. of L. had only 25,000 to 30,000 of the more than 100,000 employes in the steel mills before the last year of dissension.

The disputes, adjusted only last week, caused temporary suspension of many union locals, halted organization activities and "set us back badly," Green said.

During that time the U. S. Steel Corporation employed a high salaried expert to develop the company union plan, for which it now claims a membership of more than 90 per cent of theindustry, Green added.

"We believe," Green said, "that under the Wagner act, where they have the right to select their own representatives, they will break away from the company union and come over to us."

Plans for the campaign will be drawn up at the A. F. of L. convention opening here October 7. Representatives of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers will be in attendance.

Every effort to prevent sales tax adoption in States that so far have not enacted any likewise will be urged. "These taxes" Green said, "are bearing down very heavily upon the laboring people."

The bids will be submitted to the county board at its meeting today. It is expected the contract will go to the lowest bidder upon the recommendations of County Manager Roy S. Braden.

It is understood that, should the contract be awarded today, work will be started within ten days.

The contract calls for the use of 3,000 tons of limestone and 2,000 tons of slag.

All of the work will be along streets where sewers have not been installed.

Bids for the improvement of streets along which sewers have been installed will be opened by the county manager September 12.

Loudoun Schools Get 9-Month Term

Supervisors Add $8,000 to $85,000 Already Allotted.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 13.—Superintendent O. L. Emerick won his fight for a nine-month school term for white pupils this morning when at a special meeting of the Loudoun County Board of Supervisors a supplementing appropriation of $8,000 was made to the schools. This brings the appropriation up to $93,000. The original $85,000 appropriated at the April meeting of the supervisors was not sufficient for a nine-month term, according to Mr. Emerick, so an eight-month term was adopted at that time.

The additional appropriation will be paid out of the following sources: $6,244 out of A.B.C. funds and $1,756 out of estimated and unappropriated funds from the dog tax. An appeal was made for $900 additional for a county nurse, but this was held over to another meeting.

The supervisors this morning waived the 1931, 1932, 1933 and 1934 taxes, amounting to $12,879.36, of the Washington & Old Dominion Railway, with the understanding that the Southern Railroad will lease the line to the new owner and insure continued operations. Officials of the road, which is now in the hands of receivers, appeared before the board this morning and stated that the road, running from Rosslyn to Bluemont, as distance of some 50 miles, has a prospective purchaser if past-due taxes are wiped out.

New Yorker Lost Overboard at Sea

D. C. Davidson, 23, Leaves Letter to Kin.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 13.—David C. Davidson, 23, of New York, jumped or fell overboard from the Eastern Steamship Co. liner Robert E. Lee as the vessel steamed past the Delaware capes en route from New York to Norfolk last night.

The ship cruised about the vicinity for more than an hour before abandoning search.

A key to stateroom 51 was found on the deck at the spot from which the man was seen to jump. A search of the stateroom disclosed the berth had not been disturbed. Police here learned Davidson was last seen at 10 o'clock last night, when he gave to the purser a letter containing money and addressed to a member of the Davidson family.

Montgomery Refinances Bonds At Best Terms in Its History

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Montgomery County yesterday secured the best terms for long-term bonds in its history when the John Nuveen Co., of Chicago, agreed to purchase an issue of $232,500 in suburban district street assessment refunding bonds at par with an interest rate of 3.25 per cent.

The sale will represent a saving of $32,000 in interest on the money involved, which now is in certificates that bear 6 per cent interest. In addition to the favorable rate the bonding house agreed to pay the lithographing and legal expenses, which will amount to a saving of approximately $800 for the county.

The Montgomery County commissioners were elated at the excellent price on the bonds and by the reports of the representative of the bond firm, who said that county bonds are selling with ease in the western United States.

Kensington Named.

The bond company offered a rate of 3.50 per cent interest on the bonds and a bonus of $200, but agreed to the lower interest rates when the commissioners declared they believed they could do better.

First maturity of the bonds will be in 1938 and the last in 1946.

The commissioners appointed Willard Johnson, of Kensington, to be constable in place of Malcolm D. Walter, resigned. The question of giving a week's vacation to county policemen was discussed and the decision left with Frank H. Karn, commissioner in charge of police. Karn said he favored the plan in view of the long hours policemen work.

Building Inspector Jack Gray asked that the two county building inspectors be given a $30 a month expense account in view of the fact that their salaries are $400 a year less than the former inspectors and they receive no expenses. The commissioners voted to increase the salaries of the inspectors $30 a month instead of granting the expense account.

Seek to Halt Road Work.

The commissioners directed the Social Service League continue care of indigent children through September at the request of the county welfare board.

The board wrote to Dr. H. E. Tabler, chairman of the Maryland State Roads Commission, asking that work unauthorized by the county commissioners on lateral roads and county streets be halted and only work requested by the commissioners be carried on in the future. The repair work is increasing the county roads deficit, the commissioners pointed out, and is in contradiction of an agreement which provided that this work would halt unless asked by the commissioners.

A round-table discussion of four major road projects sought for Takoma Park will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Judge Herman C. Heffner, chairman of a special joint civic committee recently appointed to present a program of road improvements to the mayor and town council.

Today's meeting is the first step in a campaign launched several months ago by local civic associations that culminated when Judge Heffner was named by Mayor Frederick L. Lawton to head a committee to draft the program.

The following projects will be discussed and inspected personally by the committee and consulting officials from the boards of county commissioners of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, the Maryland State Road Commission and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission:

1. Construction of a park drive along Sligo Creek in the first unit of Sligo Creek parkway, extending under the Carroll avenue bridge from Maple avenue to the Montgomery-Prince Georges county line.

2. Continuation of the same park drive along Sligo Creek from the bi-county line to New Hampshire avenue extended.

3. Extension of New Hampshire avenue from its present terminus just beyond the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad overpass to connect with University lane.

4. Widening and improving Eastern avenue from Laurel avenue in Takoma Park to New Hampshire avenue extended, including elimination of the present condition of having one side of the avenue 10 feet higher than the other.

The visiting delegation of officials will be headed by Nathan Smith, chief engineer of the State roads commission, and representatives of the two county boards of commissioners.

Other officials who have accepted invitations to the parley include Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways of the District of Columbia; Park Commissioner Lacy Shaw, Irving C. Root, chief engineer of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission; the Rev. Henry H. Nicoll, supervisor of roads of Montgomery County, and Mayor Lewton and members of the town council of Takoma Park.

Local civic organizations represented on the joint committee sponsoring the meeting are the Community League of Takoma Park, the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce, the Takoma Park Citizens Association, the Takoma Park Woman's Club and the Takoma Park Boundary Citizens Association.

The meeting will be devoted largely to consideration of the engineering problems involved. Financial considerations will be taken up later, Judge Heffner said yesterday, indicating that an attempt will be made to have the program included in plans of the Works Progress Administration.

The house warming held Monday night at the new community house at Valley road and Ridge Circle, under the auspices of the Civic League of Brookmont, included a vaudeville program, with L. H. O'Dell as master of ceremonies. Invocation was by the Rev. W. E. McBath. Musical selections by Jacqueline Weaver, Milton Hits, Hubert Carlock, Roberta Carlock and Dorothy Blackmon followed a reading by Mrs. Forrest Bartel.

Julia Blackmon gave a recitation and Margaret Norton a dance interpretation. Miss Dorothea Cutting sang, accompanied by Miss Annabelle McBath. Cards and refreshments followed. Mrs. Arthur Blackmon, chairman of the entertainment committee, acknowledged many gifts, including a piano, from Washington merchants.

D. L. Gray, of Conduit road, reported to police of the Bethesda sub-station yesterday that his home had been entered and silverware valued at $60, clothing valued at $5 and $6.25 in change stolen. The house was entered through an unlocked rear door.

Poultry Raisers Hear Forecast Of Big Demand

Due as Result of Red Meat Prices, Marylanders Told by Expert.

Demand for poultry and poultry products should increase during the next six months, E. L. Warren, marketing specialist for the AAA, told the Maryland State Poultry Council meeting at College Park yesterday.

He said the predicted increase would be due mainly to the higher prices obtained for red meats. At the same time, he cautioned that the demand for poultry products would be influenced by the income received by industrial workers.

Herbert D. Copeland, president of the council, pointed out that Maryland was now paying the penalty for her indifference to the future during the years of plenty.

Law's Benefits Cited.

He said the fresh-egg law, passed at the recent session of the State Legislature, is an important step toward placing the poultry industry in Maryland in line with the progress made by other States in the Northeast.

In a symposium on the fresh-egg law, Copeland told of the efforts necessary to obtain its passage. Mrs. C. T. Fowler, president of the Baltimore Housewives, Inc., described the benefits of the law to the consumer.

The benefits to the retailer were described by Elmer S. Parks, secretary of the Allied Retail Dealers of Baltimore County. Louis Banssle, of Glyden, Md., told of its value to producers. Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, discussed the educational work necessary for its success. Dr. A. L. Sullivan, commissioner of food and drugs for Baltimore, outlined the provisions of the law.

Plans for developing the poultry teaching and research plant were described by Dr. H. J. Patterson, director of the university's experiment station.

Dr. Welsh Speaks.

H. C. Byrd, acting president of the University of Maryland, told the visiting poultrymen that all people of the State have a right to expect service in the four fields of research, disease control, instruction and extension.

Other speakers included W. H. Rice, extension poultry husbandman; Roy H. Waite, professor of poultry husbandry at the university; Dr. H. M. DeVolt, specialist in poultry diseases; Dr. Mark M. Welsh, State veterinarian; Dr. S. H. DeVault, head of the department of economics; S. B. Shaw, chief of the Maryland State department of markets, and L. E. Bopst, associate State chemist.

Speakers at a dinner last night were Sidney A. Edwards, chief of the Connecticut department of markets, and James E. Rice, of Cornell University.

Approximately 1,000 poultrymen are expected at the University of Maryland today for the opening session of the Northeastern Poultry Producers' Council. The council will continue for one week.

Battlefield Park Project Approved

President Acts on Proposed Appomattox Memorial.

Creation of a national monument area out of the battlefield on which Lee surrendered to Grant at Appomattox Courthouse was given President Roosevelt's approval yesterday.

The Chief Executive signed the bill by Representative Patrick H. Drewry (Democrat), Petersburg, authorizing the Government to create a mile and a half monument area with $100,000 of Federal funds to be made available.

Contrary to the original suggestion several years ago, the monument authorized in the new act is not to be one of stone, but a park technically called a "monument" by the War College in its classifications of parks established on battlefields.

A bill proposing a shaft at the site was introduced by the late Representative Tucker several years ago. Opposition to this form of memorial developed and Representative Drewry's bill was substituted.

Fairfax Towns Vote Tax Aids For Rail Line

Bluemont Division Is Put Under Rules of Group in Proposal.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 248, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Three incorporated towns of Fairfax County, Va., have voted to remit delinquent taxes on the Bluemont division of the Washington Old Dominion Railway, provided the proposed purchaser takes over the line and continues to operate it.

The town councils of Falls Church, Vienna and Herndon adopted resolutions at meetings Monday night agreeing to remit delinquent taxes, penalties and interest due by the line for the years 1931 through 1934 if 90 per cent of the other taxing jurisdictions served by the railroad will do the same, including the State. A similar resolution already has been adopted by the board of supervisors of Fairfax County.

The railroad now operating under receivership management owes $84,755.58 in delinquent taxes and to Fairfax County alone the road is indebted $19,388.85. The Southern Railroad, owner of the line, would be liable for the taxes, but it refuses to continue to operate the line.

It has been understood by the towns that if the various jurisdictions will agree to remit their delinquent taxes a new purchaser has agreed to take over the line and operate it.

Application for a loan and grant of $55,000 from the Public Works Administration to finance installation of a water system was authorized by the town council of Vienna, Va., at a special meeting Monday night. The council will seek a grant of $24,750 and issue bonds totaling $30,250 to be repaid over a 30-year period at 4 per cent interest.

The action of the council must be approved by the State and Federal P. W. A. authorities and be submitted to a special election of the voters of the town before the installation can be started.

It has been stated that if the project is approved and the 47 fire hydrants specified in the plans are approved it will result in a reduction of insurance rates of 10 per cent on residential and up to 30 per cent on business rates in the town.

The Rev. Elbert Koch, of Culpeper, Va., was seriously injured in an automobile accident yesterday morning. According to Sheriff E. P. Kirby, Fairfax, the Rev. Mr. Koch was driving along the Lee highway about two miles east of Fairfax and must have fallen asleep. His car struck a telephone pole and was demolished.

He was found by a passing truck driver about an hour later. The sheriff was called and he rushed the injured man to Georgetown Hospital, where it was found he suffered a broken right wrist and severed arteries. He was in a critical condition from loss of blood. The truck driver, on finding the minister, immediately bound the cuts in his arm in an effort to stop the bleeding.

Motorist to Test Refusal of Bond

Cubbage, Freed on Writ, Will Appeal Sentence.

Determined to test the right of Police Court Judge John P. McMahon to refuse to admit him to bail pending an appeal from a Traffic Court conviction, Edward Cubbage, of Clarendon, Va., yesterday obtained his release from the District Jail on a writ of habeas corpus signed by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, in the District Supreme Court.

Cubbage was found guilty of driving without a permit. He claimed he had lost his Virginia permit a few days before his arrest, and had applied for a duplicate. This, he said, was explained to Judge McMahon, but the latter convicted him and sentenced him to pay a fine of $25 or serve 15 days in jail. An appeal was noted, but Judge McMahon refused to fix bail and Cubbage went to jail.

J. Bart Clines, attorney for Cubbage, yesterday applied to Justice Letts for his client's release on bond pending an appeal to the United States Court of Appeals. He claimed Cubbage was being illegally deprived of his freedom. Justice Letts ordered the man released on a $100 bond and continued the hearing to August 23.

Flight Planned To Set Record For Endurance

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

An attempt to shatter the world's endurance-flight record will be made at the Alexandria Airport, at Hybla Valley, 4 miles south of Alexandria on the Richmond-Washington highway, according to a bulletin posted at the flying field. The flight will be sponsored by Mrs. Jessie Piehl, of New York City, and the starting date is designated as September 1.

The pilots in the endurance flight will be Col. J. J. Grady, formerly a World War airman in the Royal Canadian Air Force, and E. W. Robertson. The pilot of the refueling plane has not been definitely named, but it is believed that Haywood Robertson, a brother of the endurance flier, will handle the controls, and it is rumored that Mrs. Piehl will accompany the refueling plane on all flights.

The endurance flight was originally planned for the Washington Airport, but a switch in plans named the Alexandria flying field as the starting point, in view of the more favorable conditions existing there.

The plans provide for staying aloft for 60 days, which, if accomplished, will more than double the present record of 653 hours and 34 minutes, held by A. E. and Fred Key, of Meridian, Miss. Two Stinson planes will be used, one for the actual flight and the other for refueling purposes. They are the property of the flight's sponsor.

The Alexandria Lions Club will meet in the George Mason Hotel today. Isadore Bregman is program chairman, and Dr. Schlosser, club president, will preside. Reports on the "donkey" baseball games, to be held on Baggett's Field August 21 and 22, will be made.

A dollar day sale will be held in Alexandria tomorrow under the auspices of the Retail Merchants Association, and a record-breaking crowd is expected to take advantage of the unusual bargains offered. Many of the merchants will employ extra clerks to handle the increased business expected.

George Hewitt and Warner W. Wood are those alleged in the indictment to have taken the elderly King across the District of Columbia line into Maryland and to have attempted to obtain money from a bank in Upper Marlboro, threatening King with harm if the cash was not forthcoming.

Floyd E. Lehman was brought before United States Commissioner James K. Cullen and held under $5,000 bail for a hearing August 21 on charges of impersonating an officer.

Lehman was arrested in Chicago last week and brought to Baltimore Saturday. On advice of Cullen he pleaded not guilty. Transformer Blast in City Injures Women Flames Leap 2 Floors in Explosion at Front of The Post Building.

One woman was injured painfully when a transformer under the sidewalk in front of The Washington Post Building exploded late yesterday afternoon, shaking office structures and stores in the vicinity and bringing all available fire-fighting apparatus and police to the scene of the blast.

The transformer let go with a terrific roar, sending flames two floors above the street. The impact shattered several windows in the building, although, after the first shock, work continued as usual.

The injured woman, Miss Marcia Ostrom, 46, of 1426 K stree northwest, was passing the building at the time. She was given first-aid in a drug store and then rushed to Emergency Hospital, where physicians said she suffered burns of her face, neck, chest and left arm. Her condition is not serious.

Fifteen pieces of fire apparatus responded to the general alarm. Two rescue squads and an Emergency Hospital ambulance were rushed to the scene, as were three emergency cars of the Potomac Electric Power Co., which installed the transformer. More than 2,000 people gathered in the excitement.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Assistant Superintendent L. I. H. Edwards took charge of policemen, who held back the crowds from the blast area with ropes. The alarm brought the entire motorcycle squad, which had just finished roll call at the time.

Donning gas masks, firemen climbed into the basement through a manhole and fought the flames.

District officials, investigating at the order of Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, said the blast probably was caused by a short circuit. The transformer was one of six which are contained in sets of three each in two vaults.

"It is up to us to go into the whole question of these transformers, their design and their installation," said Col. Sultan last night.

At about the same time that the transformer in The Post Building let go a transformer at the Treasury Department blew out. There was no actual blast, employes said, but the air-conditioning system will be temporarily curtailed.

Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom and Fire Marshal Calvin Lauber estimated the damage at $2,500.

Court Declares AAA Tax Illegal

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 13.—The Federal hog processing tax was branded as "'unprecedented," taking from one class of the population to give to another, by Judge W. Calvin Chesnut today in ruling it unconstitutional.

Judge Chesnut decided in favor of John A. Gebelein, Baltimore meat packer, in a Federal court suit assailing the New Deal measure. He granted an injunction against the Government's collecting the processing levy.

He held the tax was unconstitutional on two grounds. One was that the agricultural adjustment act embodying it regulated agricultural production, and Congress had no power to enact a special levy for this purpose. The other was that Congress had granted the Secretary of Agriculture unwarranted authority and discretion for fixing the amount of the tax.

WHY SHOULD I BUY A FUR or FUR TRIMMED COAT NOW?

If you are thinking of buying a coat for next winter's wear, you will be interested in these questions—which you may have asked yourself—and their answers.

Why should I buy a fur coat now?

Because August Fur Sales give you the opportunity to buy quality furs at low prices. Many alert merchants have developed August into an "extra" Fur Season by offering the inducement of lower prices in August.

Why do I get more careful workmanship now? Don't reputable furriers always do good work?

Of course they do. However, working skins in a fur coat is as much an art as making a fine watch. If a man can do a careful, unhurried job, his result is likely to be better than if he has to meet a deadline because the cold weather has set in, and orders are piling up. This is true also of alterations.

Do you mean that skins in coats bought now are actually better than those offered for sale in the cold weather?

Not necessarily, but often so. For the most part, coats offered for sale now are made from first-selection skins. The furriers who made them had the pick of the market from which to make their choices.

That's another thing. How do I know styles won't change by winter?

Fur coat styles are conservative. There are always novelties, of course, but it is true that the major styles of the season are now set. The fur coats you will be shown today are the same you will see on sale in the middle of winter.

Have the stores really got large enough selections now for choice?

Yes, indeed. The August Fur Sale is an institution. Most merchants have a complete range of styles and furs ready to show you now.

I suppose a deposit will hold any coat in storage until I need it?

Yes. Most firms gladly make arrangements so that a small deposit will keep coats in cold storage until you want them.

If you want a new fur coat you owe it to yourself to take advantage of the August sales. Watch the fur coat advertisements as they appear in The Washington Post. They will keep you informed of the newest styles, and the current price trends.

Much Ado About Hopson.

The protracted elusiveness of Mr. Howard Hopson seems to have given both the House and Senate lobby investigating committees a highly exaggerated idea of his value as a witness. Now that the gentleman has been found, by the House sleuths, he is apparently to be zealously guarded against the Senate committee until his headline value has been thoroughly extracted. All this is as silly as Mr. Hopson's self-righteous resentment over public prying into his private affairs.

Instead of vying with each other for temporary custody of Mr. Hopson's substantial person, the House and Senate would do well to concentrate on backing efforts of their conferees to come to constructive agreement on the different bills for utility regulation. We already have had occasion in these columns to comment on certain of the major differences which separate the House and Senate versions. The discovery of the reputed "master mind" of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. itself emphasizes another point of controversy.

One of the constructive developments of the lobby investigation is the clear indication that the Associated Gas & Electric is the type of holding company which the utility leaders themselves wish to ostracize. That being so, Congress is obviously working at cross-purposes if it is intentionally or unintentionally fostering the belief that through Mr. Hopson's testimony revelations inimical to the entire industry will be revealed.

Let House or Senate investigating committee—to the public it doesn't matter which—extract what can be extracted from Mr. Hopson, regardless of his sensitive reticence about his personal affairs. But at the same time, and more important, let the conferees concentrate on a harmonization of the Senate and House regulation measures which will forward the praiseworthy ambition of the industry to eliminate socially undesirable companies without wrecking those against which there is no case.

The Wrong Method.

If congressional resolutions denouncing the internal problems of other countries are undesirable, the same holds true in even stronger degree for expressions of opinion on such subjects by State legislative bodies. State governments have no responsibility whatsoever for the conduct of our foreign relations. Indeed, section 10 of Article I of the Constitution implies that it is illegal for them to take any action which could reasonably be regarded by a foreign power as an unfriendly act. So the Massachusetts House of Representatives is laying itself open to justified rebuke by adopting a resolution which "views with alarm" the current persecutions in Germany.

The issue is not the moral justification of the resolution, though even here it is always desirable to be sure one's own house is in perfect order before commenting on the deficiencies of one's neighbors. The real point is that complete authority for conducting our relations with other countries rests with the Federal Government, being delegated by it to the Department of State.

Any intrusion by a State Legislature in the sphere of foreign relations is not merely improper in principle, but also weakens the position of the Department of State by giving the country against which protest is made a legitimate grievance against the United States. If our Government is to function successfully in meeting both national and international problems the constitutional limitations on States rights, as well as those on the authority of the Federal Government, must be clearly recognized.

There are many ways in which public resentment over the fanaticism now rampant in Germany may properly be expressed. That which the Nazi regime undoubtedly fears most is the movement to have the United States withdraw from the Olympic games, scheduled to be held in Berlin next year, on the ground that no international festival symbolic of good sportsmanship can logically be indorsed if subject to the control of the Nazi government.

Against obviously unofficial reprisals of this sort, wearers of the Swastika are helpless. Against intemperate resolutions by seemingly official yet actually irresponsible agents of local government they have the unquestioned right of protest. Thus the real issue is obscured and the case for civilization is weakened because its presentation is at variance with the essential procedure of orderly international relations.

The Guffey Coal Bill.

The high-pressure methods employed to secure action on the Guffey coal bill are as questionable as those used to force an unwilling Congress to accept the Administration's tax program. In certain respects, indeed, the procedure in the former case is more high-handed, since President Roosevelt has actually urged members of Congress "not to permit doubts as to constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation." Although the bill has been much modified since the decision in the Schechter case was announced, its passage would precipitate court battles having a further unstabilizing effect upon the coal industry.

The Federal Government must be very sure of its ground before setting out to solve the problems of this overdeveloped and highly competitive industry, even though it is undoubtedly in great need of some kind of assistance, emphasized by the collapse of the code structure. Instead it seems to have been hurried into indorsement of an economically unwise regulatory plan by threats of strikes.

To agree that the "excessive facilities for the production of bituminous coal have led to practices and methods of production and distribution that waste the coal resources of the Nation" does not imply that the resultant effect upon interstate commerce justifies Federal control over intrastate operations such as coal mining and local distribution of coal. Furthermore, a mere declaration by Congress that the coal industry is "affected with a national public interest" will not validate an extraordinary extension of Federal powers over the industry, embracing official fixing of maximum and minimum prices, methods of marketing, provisions for collective bargaining and various other matters.

Apart from the constitutional objections to the Snyder-Guffey bill, however, it is economically unsound because it attempts to establish by law detailed rules for the conduct of a competitive industry which has to adapt its production and sales policies to constantly changing market conditions. There is an elaborate formula for ascertaining production costs and directions for determining minimum prices for various kinds of coal. In practice these price-fixing provisions would permit Federal control agencies located in Washington to exercise wide and arbitrary discretionary powers. There are also provisions covering fair trade practices which were a part of the abandoned coal code. Such rules should be subject to change without the necessity of amending a law passed by Congress. They result in rigidity where adaptability is required, except insofar as they are mere prohibitions of admittedly illegal and fraudulent practices.

The bill further provides for a levy on mined coal known as an excise tax. This is in reality a fine or penalty imposed upon those producers who fail to comply with the provisions of the coal code, since "drawbacks" of 90 per cent are allowed to all who conform. As this taxing power is obviously invoked for an ulterior purpose, its constitutionality is likewise open to doubt.

With prices fixed and wages and hours determined by collective bargaining methods outlined in the proposed measure, the coal industry would almost certainly find its prices raised and its ability to sell its products in competition with other fuels impaired. If such extensive regulation is found to be essential in order to prevent exploitation of labor, it should in justice be extended to cover competing industries. In no case should hard-and-fast legal restrictions be imposed where voluntary agreements enforceable by law and subject to change at the will of the majority are feasible.

The coal industry has waited a long time to be rescued from the competitive morass in which it is floundering. A little more delay will not be disastrous if it results in legislation less subject to valid criticism than is the Guffey bill.

Soak Before Reading.

Eugene Field once said that "All good and true book-lovers practice the pleasing and improving avocation of reading in bed." He forgot to add anything about bathtub reading, which is also a favorite indoor sport. Devotees of the latter cult fall into the habit for various reasons; some to save time, others because time hangs heavy on their hands. The rites are quite simple. In this weather, simply draw a tub about three-fourths full of cool water; grasp a book or magazine firmly with one hand and something stable with the other to avoid complete immersion; then settle down, leaving only the head out. This is guaranteed to furnish complete relaxation provided the wife or the telephone doesn't have to be answered.

In Austria, the art of tub-reading is motivated by a much more complex reason. A Viennese draws a tub full of piping hot water, throws his magazine in, lets it soak while he sits around and waits, then takes it out to be read. All this because when certain portions of foreign magazines are banned by the Austrian censors, instead of destroying the whole periodical, they simply paste the questionable pages together. Ingenious readers are, therefore, compelled to soak their literature to get the leaves apart. The procedure must be much more thrilling than slitting the uncut pages of a book.

Of late years there have been various and sundry forms of censorship and usually equally as many ways to get around them. Issues of Il Becco Giallo, an anti-Fascist bulletin, used to be sent from Paris into Italy in envelopes humorously bearing the names of Fascist organizations. Censorship such as is being enforced in Austria and elsewhere is frequently as laughable as the measures taken to evade it. It is not merely the bathtub trick which shows that the article censored holds water better than the argument for censorship.

The Case Of Southeast.

Businessmen of Southeast Washington are aroused, first, over the condition of the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge across the Anacostia River, and, second, the location of the District garbage transfer station. They plan to file a protest with the President and, failing satisfaction from the White House, they threaten to take matters up in court. Their objections are not at all unreasonable.

The Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, over which a large part of shore-bound traffic moves, is a venerable structure dating back to the early '90's. Today, and particularly at week-ends, the tremendous volume of automobile traffic is almost beyond its capacity. More than that, the trusses and beams of the old bridge have seen long service. Only a few days ago, to the delight of those who are urging its replacement, a section of the sill under the roadway collapsed, requiring a new set of timbers to make it safe.

The bridge should go, cry the spokesmen of Southeast Washington. Though still safe from a structural standpoint, its bottleneck features discourage traffic (and thus business) on Pennsylvania avenue. Local merchants, casting envious eyes at the elaborate highway construction in other parts of the city, ask for a new and modern bridge. There is no one to disagree with them, excepting only a coterie of Congressmen.

District officials, while not admitting that Southeast has been the victim of any discrimination (they point, for instance, to the costly reconditioning of Eleventh street) are eager to see a new Pennsylvania avenue bridge. Proof of their sincerity is to be found in the fact that an item of $15,000 was included in the District budget for preliminary survey work. The Commissioners shepherded the item safely through the Budget Bureau, saw it defeated in the House, reinstated in the Senate and ultimately thrown out in conference. Only a handful of Congressmen can be blamed for the lack of a new Pennsylvania avenue bridge.

In the matter of the garbage transfer station, the citizens of Southeast insist that in its present location it constitutes a smelly nuisance and one that accounts in good part for low property values and poor business conditions in the neighborhood. They urge that the station be shifted to an isolated spot near Buzzard's Point where trucks could dump their loads into railroad cars for shipment to the Cherry Hill reduction plant. Here again the Commissioners are sympathetic. Only yesterday a committee composed of District health and sanitary officers together with disposal experts was named to inquire into the subject. But their recommendations are also bound to cost money to put into effect, and again Congress holds the purse strings.

The Southeast has a good case. But in addition to protests and threats to the White House and District Building, it might well lead the rest of the disorganized community in a study of the governmental defects which underlie these problems. In so doing it would hasten the day when Washington can in greater measure determine for itself what it needs, when it needs it, and how it shall be accomplished.

Immortal Bird.

No ornithologist will deny the thesis of the Saturday Review of Literature that verse-makers have underestimated the music of the hermit-thrush in overpraising the song of the nightingale. But when Dr. Canby's weekly journal seeks a reason for the latter's poetic popularity, and for Euterpe's coldness toward the hermit-thrush, that journal surely goes a step astray. "Nightingale," it complains, "is a beautiful word that will put music in any line," whereas, though the hermit-thrush possesses notes "which would have set poets romancing long before this," her name, alas, is not so "euphonious as 'nightingale'."

Of course "nightingale" is euphonious—but of course euphony is not the sole cause of that distinction which disturbs the Saturday Review. Pleasurable sounds provide a principal part of poetry, but not even in poetry is euphony self-justified. The Verse Market proves this: Witness the long low in Longfellow, Ltd., not to mention the collapse of Swinburne Preferred.

Music is more than sound. In poetry, connotation counts always—sometimes, the late Dadaists to the contrary notwithstanding, even sense is important. Will any ear refuse beauty to the sound of "typhoid"? But will any reader, except a physician, contend that it "puts music in any line?"

The fact is that the nightingale is popular with poets present primarily because poets past agreed to accept a pretty story about her: She is Philomela "that singeth with her breast against a thorn." If the Saturday Review really wants the hermit-thrush to be as well loved, it will promulgate an equally appealing legend about the domestic songster—and get the legend believed. Then, and only then, will some American poet hear, from the hermit-thrush's throat, "eternal passion and eternal pain!"

The Treasury Department is considering issuing a half-cent piece with a hole in it. If we can't streamline our money, at least we can air-condition it.

Letters To The Editor.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Critic To Critic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Musician's" vituperative letter to The Post, dated August 10, does not vitally affect my stand for better music. Admittedly, my letter was crude, but it does not represent a lone opinion either. A number of people, including this abashed writer, believe that the National Symphony Orchestra has made great strides, but that it is a long way from being in the same class as the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. "Musician" missed an important point raised by my banal comment. And that is in regard to programs. It would be interesting to find out what percentage of Bach and Mozart, two of the greatest composers, has been included in the programs to date. Nor should "Musician" fall into the error of thinking that in my considered opinion the perfect program should neglect entirely the more modern composers.

And, finally, I would leave this thought with "Musician." I would have him call to mind Voltaire's famous remark to the effect that I disagree entirely with what you are saying, but I will defend your right to the death to say it.

Youth And Government.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is not the first time that youth has run a government. In 1783, just after our Revolution and before the French Revolution, William Pitt, son of the great Earl of Chatham, became Prime Minister of England at the age of 24. Educated under the rigid discipline of Eton and of Cambridge University, he came to Parliament with a mind steadied by iron devotion to political sincerity. When called to the premiership at age, that some clever but not prophetic rhymster issued the following couplet:

A sight to make surrounding nations start
A kingdom trusted to a school-boy's care.

With this difference, William Pitt was, like his great father, devoid of personal vanity. Unlike his towering progenitor, he never accepted a title, but lived and died as William Pitt the Younger. He knew the difference between lightness and solidity. He was neither an irreclaimable sophomore nor a perpetual freshman. He had reached man's intellectual status and stature before he entered Parliament.

And what a great tradition encompassed this young statesmen. His father, the great Earl of Chatham, did not hesitate as Premier of England, and speaking for the Commons of Great Britain, to tell George III, the most unreasonable King of that age, where his power ended and the people's rights began. Said Chatham (I quote from memory), "An Englishman's house is his castle. His rights and his property are his own. The rains may invade it, the winds may enter, but the King of England with all his forces dare not enter—he dare not cross the threshold of the ruined tenement."

America owes much to Chatham. He defended the colonies against George III. But however much we owe him, all humanity owes him an everlasting debt of gratitude for his defense of everyday rights.

He was fortunate in his son, who for 17 years remained Prime Minister of England and in that period William Pitt the Younger, alone, wisely for his people though perhaps not so wisely for civilization, conquered Bonaparte. At all events, he did not tear down the existing structure of English institutions, but he defended and bulwarked them with the greatness of his unpretentious genius. All history will bear testimony that the Pitts were absolutely above and beyond the possibility of cheapness.

There are many useful lessons and reflections to be gleaned from Anglo-Saxon civilization. On that granite rock rest the caught-up ideals of the American Revolution and its superb embodiment, the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. Michelson Is Confounded.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In today's issue of The Post Charles Michelson, the able publicity director of the Democratic National Committee, calls you to task because "in your leading editorial on the significance of the Rhode Island election you describe the First District of that State as 'heretofore consistently Democratic.'"

And, Mr. Editor, you are right; the First District has been "consistently Democratic" at every election since it has been the First District in its present form, except in the recent election when it went Republican in the election of Mr. Risk. Formerly there were three congressional districts in the midget State of Rhode Island, but early in 1932 the number of districts was reduced from three to two. In 1932 Mr. Condon was the first member elected in the new and larger First District. A good portion of the discarded Third District was added to the old First District, taking in a portion of the City of Providence. In 1934 Mr. Condon was re-elected on the Democratic ticket, but resigned to accept a seat on the bench. So since the reorganized and enlarged First District there have been three congressional elections there, including this recent special one. Therefore the First District has gone Democratic twice and Republican once since it has been reorganized and made larger in area and the number of voters. It is plain, however, in view of Mr. Condon's Democratic majority of 21,000 in 1934, and his first election in the Roosevelt landslide of 1932, that Mr. Risk's very substantial Republican majority at this very recent election is a positive repudiation of Mr. Roosevelt's New Deals.

JAMES MARTIN MILLER.
Takoma Park, Md., Aug. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his letter appearing on the editorial page of The Post of today, Charles Michelson, director of publicity of the Democratic National Committee, undertakes to trace the results of votes in the first Rhode Island district for 70-odd years just to show that it's a nominally Republican district. He forgets that the present First District was created only three years ago when Rhode Island's representation in the House of Representatives was reduced from three to two as a result of the 1930 census.

In 1932 the Democrats carried this new district by a plurality of 14,489, and in 1934 they carried it by a plurality of 21,431. So that up to the recent special election the district always had been Democratic.

As an argument on your side that the district is nominally Democratic, or at least more Democratic than the Second District, is furnished by the figures in the 1932 and 1934 elections. In 1932 the Democratic plurality in the First District was 14,489 in a vote of 126,591, while in the Second District the Democratic plurality was only 12,928 in a vote of 133,270. In 1934 the Democratic plurality in the First District was 21,431, against a Democratic plurality of only 14,574 in the Second District.

The three votes cast in this new First District might be analyzed: 1932, pledge to wed; 1934, oh, blissful honeymoon; 1935, petition for divorce.

JAMES L. WEST.
Washington, Aug. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is well that Charley Michelson's letter in this morning's Post should give a cold-headed interpretation of the Rhode Island election. But the same result applied to all the congressional districts in the country would with equal consistency forecast the return of an anti-Administration House of Representatives and defeat of President Roosevelt in 1936.

Furthermore, any third party defection would emphasize the Democratic defeat and the opposition success. And for the first time in the history of the Government an election thrown in the House by the failure of any one candidate to receive an electoral majority would be decided in and by the new House to be elected one year from November, and not by a holdover Congress.

Still further is reflected and emphasized the political probability of a change in the Administration.

Paint For Curbs?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This morning's Post carried an article conveying the information that hereafter parking will be prohibited within 25 feet of a street intersection. While I believe that this new proposal is a move in the right direction and that probably a greater distance might be better even than the 25-foot minimum, I believe that conditions could be greatly improved if the present 20-foot rule were enforced.

Many people have little conception of distance. They do not know how long 10 feet, 15 feet, 20 feet, or 25 feet really is. In many cities this is overcome by painting curbs near fire hydrants, at intersections, and other restricted areas. This aids local residents as well as visitors, of whom Washington has an unusually large quota.

In walking to lunch each noon I seldom find an intersection at which a car is not within the present 20-foot limit. Many times one has to walk around a car which is part way across the crosswalk. I realize that paint on the curbing may be offensive from an esthetic point of view, but I wonder if the District Commissioners will not be forced eventually to its use.

Schoolbooks At Hollywood.

Post Office, Wednesday.

DEAR CHRISTINA: A rumor reaches this big-eared Column that you entertain ambitions to become a second Shirley Temple—and this Column certainly wishes you success. Considering that our friend Irvin Cobb has almost justly called Shirley "the loveliest Christmas package Santa Claus ever wrapped up," your ambition (an ambition shared by nearly every other American girl of your age) is entirely praiseworthy.

But the rumor also attributes to you an idea that motion-picture "juveniles" enjoy a splendid liberation from school restrictions, a shimmering acquaintance with elder stars—perhaps an unlimited diet of ice cream soda. And there truth compels us to inform you that

You
Are All
Wet.

In point of fact, dear Christina, the "professional" children of Hollywood are more strictly guarded than the average child in the average home—and their school-education is harder work than even their screen "play."

Although the law began to interfere in this matter only 10 years ago, the picture-producers themselves had it well in hand before that date. On the Paramount lot, out there, stands one little schoolhouse of the New England type, which is a veritable antique—in comparison to the big stage-structures and vast projection-rooms around it. It has been abandoned for better quarters, but the company keeps it as a kind of monument to those women—Paramount's own Rachel Smith holds the most lengthy service-record among them—to whom is entrusted the special care of picture-youngsters.

The law wants these children's health protected, their education secured. Those women want to attend to these things and a good deal more besides: they want to see that their charges "remain happy and unspoiled."

Dear Christina, you won't get a Hollywood job on just the strength of your talents as an actress. Before you may so much as register as a candidate, you will have to pass a physical exam and get a "labor certificate." And when the studio doors open to you, you will be in for at least as many book-lessons as you are getting now.

The camera refuses to shoot you more than four hours a day. Until you are in the eighth grade at school, you won't be allowed to work after 10 p. m. If you are one of the younger youngsters, you must knock off at 6 or 8 o'clock.

Christina, dear, the horrid truth is that all the big studios employ regular resident teachers, who are trained social-workers chosen by the Los Angeles school board and qualified to instruct not alone in the Three R's and geography, but in Latin, French, physics and elementary chemistry. A while ago, Mrs. Thomas G. Winter had an article on Hollywood children in The Motion Picture and the Family which we seriously recommend to you. She declared:

"Stories abound of the extraordinary efforts that are expended by these teachers to subordinate the children's studio experiences to their childhood needs."

Mrs. Winter said, for instance, that "when Baby Le Roy first came to the Paramount lot, Miss Smith and his mother planned his schedule with the greatest care. He was brought from home in a special automobile. His milk and scraped vegetables were all carefully prepared. A baby-carriage was supplied for his nap—and when 11 o'clock in the morning came, nap it was," no matter what critical stage had been reached by the picture-makers.

"Once," says Mrs. Winter, "he slept through until 4 in the afternoon. A whole company, costing $2,000 an hour, waited until he woke for the filming of the single brief scene in which he appeared."

Again, there came to the lot for a single day's work a certain little girl who was having a good deal of trouble with one particular branch of her studies in her regular school. "Miss Smith spent the entire time coaching her in that subject, and sent her back the next day to her crowded room in a public school (of Los Angeles) with a new understanding that lifted her over her academic difficulties." The difficulties of the picture-makers remained, apparently, unsolved!

* * * *

No, dear Christina, as far as less school is concerned, the movies aren't something to escape to; they're something to escape from!

We'd love to see you out-Shirley Miss Temple.

But you wouldn't want to have to out-school her—would you? Would you want even to school-equal her?

According to a confidential informant of this Column, Miss Temple has longer school-hours in Hollywood than you in Washington.

Our confidential informant goes further. He declares that Miss Temple prefers her school to her studio.

But we suspect that at this point our confidential informant becomes a public press-agent.

POST-IMPRESSIONIST.

The Rich Then and Now.

New York, Aug. 13.

THE widow of Harry Lehr, the celebrated bull-butterfly of New York society in the days of the 400, has written her memoirs and, incidentally, his, in a book called "King Lehr and the Gilded Age." Mr. Lehr was effeminate, a narcissus who loved pretty things and admired the curve of his own leg, a tabby in trousers, a lifelong moocher and notwithstanding the author's sympathetic effort to justify his reputation as a wit and the life of a thousand and one parties, apparently one of the most poisonous and creepy bores that the world has ever known.

Like some of the noted professional amateurs of the tennis business in the recent era of wonderful nonsense he was master of all the arts of genteel moochery, sponging his food, clothing and wine until he drew a bead on a rich young woman and became a nominal husband at a salary of $25,000 a year plus his board, keep and pickings. His idea of a wonderful joke was to dress up in a woman's ermine robe and masquerade as the Czar of Russia, and society at Newport was dumb enough to believe that the Czar could have left Russia and arrived at Newport secretly.

"The ladies nearest the entrance," says Mrs. Lehr, "in varying degrees of hesitancy sank in a court courtesy only to recover themselves with shrieks of laughter when they realized they were paying homage to Harry Lehr."

It will readily be seen what a cut-up Mr. Lehr must have been, and from this and other incidents in the book the reader slowly gathers an appreciation of the ghastly stupidity of that set which was the envy of the country at the time.

• • • •

HOWEVER, it is more interesting to draw a comparison between the rich and spend-thrill families of those days and the dollar aristocracy of the present. For, although those were horse and buggy days and the common people worked hard for little more than a living, if that, the extravagance of the 400 was notorious and to be "in trade" was a deadly social handicap. They aped a diseased and degenerate European aristocracy, that had jewels in their horses' harness and one imperious old battle-ax was so proud and aloof that she rated space next to pure reading matter when she finally condescended to fan soup in a public restaurant.

By contrast and indicating how sensitive to the opinion of the hoi polloi the rich of the present generation have become, the current mood of the aristocracy is to play poor and democratic, and, among the males, the favorite theme is their early hardships and humble childhood. In conversation with various rich Americans in Detroit, Chicago, and New York in recent years, your correspondent has been impressed by a rather pathetic insistence on their horny-handedness and their pride in having been newsboys, soda jerkers, fight managers, and section hands not so many years ago. This is accompanied by an affected profanity which is intended to indicate how rough and rugged and of the people they remain in spite of having amassed fortunes, which is rather sad for it suggests that they are ashamed of their success and luck, or, anyway, afraid to take pride in it.

The scions and scionesses of those days were carefully educated in snobbery, whereas the rich young men and women of the present frequent the saloons and night clubs where undressed females dance the squirm, crawling from pub to pub until all hours of the night in the company of underworld characters.

Not only that, but some among them take jobs mooing into the microphones as honky-tonk entertainers, at which they are not much worse than their social inferiors who have to do it for a living, and others prove their honest democratic feeling by selling gowns, hats and perfume to their friends or writing articles to the effect that they are weary of the sham and tinsel of it all.

• • • •

AS to whether they are any less stupid as a class than the aristocrats of the nineties, a hairline decision is required. Certainly it takes no great intelligence to succeed as a barfly or a clothes-horse in a dilettante shop, and noises which the scions and scionesses emit when they thrust their features up to the microphone bespeak no depth of mind.

But, definitely, society has become self-conscious under the gaze of the lower classes and is striving hard to be a good fellow by trading small talk with the cab drivers at night and disowning the fancy airs and manners of the past.

Newport is badly mildewed around the edges; Palm Beach is just another winter resort; Saratoga is the summer headquarters of Broadway and the underworld, and the millionaire of today has become a pest who wants to button-hole indifferent strangers and tell them about the summer he worked in a brickyard for a dollar a day. Mr. Lehr is well dead and out of it.

Andre and Hale

By William Lyon Phelps

BECAUSE the world is naturally more interested in individual personalities than in wholesale calamities, these two young gentlemen, both of whom were hanged during the war of the American Revolution, have had more mourners than perhaps any others who lost their lives in the same struggle.

But there is an interesting difference. Everyone, British or American, is sorry for Andre; everyone pities him. No one is sorry for Hale; no one pities him.

• • • •

John Andre was a brilliant young gentleman, of irreproachable character, and considerable attainments in art and in writing. The sketch of himself sitting at his table was made by him on the morning of the day he was hanged; and is now in the Library of Yale University. He had much humor and unusual talent in versification. He wrote a parody in three parts; the last appeared in print on the day he was taken. He wrote a military journal, which was discovered in 1902.

Even the revolutionists in America were shocked by the fate of this charming and honorable young gentleman; and many were astonished that Washington insisted on his execution and also refused him a soldier's death by gunfire, but condemned him to be hanged. Washington, however, was entirely within his rights, and nothing could have proved to both sides more definitely that this had become a war between two nations and not a rebellion. Everyone who reads about Andre loves him; everyone pities him. He was hanged on October 2, 1780; he was nearly 30 years old. A tablet to his memory is in Westminster Abbey.

The Military In Japan

Army Plays Leading Role In Directing Affairs Of Nippon Life.

Recent Shake-up Interpreted As Effort to Solidify Dominant Faction.

By Frank Hedges.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo (By Mail.).

A SHAKE-UP in the army personnel of the United States or Great Britain or most nations is of very little interest outside military circles, for it usually has no particular significance save to those directly concerned. Not so in Japan, and particularly not so in Japan at the present moment. The retirement, promotion and changes of command among Japanese army officers from full generals down to the lower rank of commissioned officers which the Emperor sanctioned for August 1 attracted the attention of the whole nation to the exclusion of other important events and was carried in considerablee detail by cable and radio to the press of the world.

The explanation is a simple one. There is a civilian government in Japan, of course, with a premier, a cabinet, a bicamerial legislature and all of the ministries and other offices requisite to a civilian government. There is also the imperial Japanese army and the imperial Japanese Navy. Since September 1, 1931, the date of the Mukden incident and the inauguration of Japan's present policy on the Asiatic mainland, the Japanese army has been the dominant factor in determining that policy, has had tremendous influence on domestic affairs, has been largely responsible for the increase by leaps and bounds of the national budget and has colored the thinking of the great mass of the Japanese people.

It would be incorrect, of course, to say that the Japanese army is the government of Japan today, always under the aegis of the Emperor, of course, but it approaches such a status. When army and government have disagreed, the army has most frequently triumphed during the past four years.

For that reason, members of the House of Peers as quoted by the Rengo News Agency of Tokyo state that "the personnel change will have greater influence over the future development of Japan's politics than the cabinet change of July, 1934, which brought the present Okada administration into being in succession to the Saito cabinet."

• • • •

THIS dominant position of the army in Japan at present is not to be condemned outright, which is the inclination of the average American. The American is apt to think of it in parallel terms with his own country, and to envisage what it would mean if the American Army occupied the influential position in Washington which the Japanese army does in Tokyo. That is not a fair comparison and it is not a true parallel. Japanese conditions, Japanese historical development and background, Japanese modes of thought must be taken into consideration, and when this is done a conclusion quite different from that of the average American will be reached.

The Anglo-Saxon peoples have evolved the democratic form of government for themselves, and it is apparently the form of government best suited to them. At least, whatever its faults—and they are multitude—it is the only form of government under which they are willing to live. Its great merit is, of course, that changes in government are possible and are accomplished by peaceful means rather than by armed revolt, a condition impossible under a dictatorship.

Japan is under no dictatorship. The Japanese people have likewise evolved their own form of government through the centuries, and it is quite natural to presume that it is the form best suited to them—that it is the only one under which they are willing to live and the one under which they are most happy and contented. That form of government is, in the fewest possible words, a divinely supreme and all-powerful Emperor aided by the advice and activity of a small group of the ablest men in the empire. These men are sometimes called in other lands the "men behind the throne," but that phrase is both inaccurate and misleading. They are, rather, the men whom the throne has selected because of their character and ability and because their policies are in accord with the wishes of the majority of the nation. The Emperor of Japan is as heedful of his subjects as is the head of any state, whether by election or inheritance, in any land.

AS in a democracy, a change in government is possible and is accomplished in Japan by peaceful means rather than by armed revolt. The change by which the power passed from the hands of party political leaders into that of the heads of the army now nearly four years ago was thus accomplished. When the time comes for that power to be returned to the civilian element, it will come about in the same way. At present, the Japanese army is giving the people of Japan what they want, or at least what they think they want. When the army ceases to do this, its power will vanish and other leaders will replace its marshals and generals as the directors, under the Emperor, of the empire's destiny.

Party political leaders are themselves largely responsible for this ascendancy of the army during the past four years, although the disturbed conditions in Manchukuo and adjacent regions have given the military a powerful grip on public emotion. Unfortunately, party politics had so degenerated in Japan that the electorate had lost all faith in sufficient of its political leaders to welcome their ousting by anyone, and the army and navy did the ousting. Not all of Japan's political leaders were corrupt, by any means, and most, if not all, of those permanently in government service, such as the foreign office personnel, were above suspicion.

Coupled with this distrust in its political leaders, the Japanese public has been subject to a war psychology since the Mukden incident. When such a psychological state prevails, the inclination is to put faith in strong men, and to the Japanese the army and the navy spell strength.

Any American more than 35 years old can remember when America, too, was experiencing a war psychology, and if this memory be called up it will be much easier to understand the present Japanese policy and action.

• • • •

THE changes in army personnel which the minister of war, Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, has just announced as being sanctioned by the Emperor, are universally welcomed throughout the empire except by those adversely affected in a direct way. They were heralded by the forced resignation of the inspector general of military education, Gen. Jinzaburo Mazaki, and his replacement by Gen. Jotaro Watanabe. The inspector general of military education is one of what is known as the "Big Three" in Japanese army circles, the other two being the minister of war himself and the chief of the general staff, at present Field Marshal Prince Kotohito Kan-in, a close relative of the Emperor.

These three men dominate the army. The Japanese army is very tight-lipped and it is not always possible to discover what is going on within its ranks, but the general belief of the Japanese public is that Gen. Mazaki has for some time past been the active head of a faction which was striving to place itself in control of the Japanese military machine and so, as things exist at the moment, become the principal advisers to the Emperor on both foreign and domestic policy. Gen. Mazaki was the active head of this faction, but the real head was Gen. Sadao Araki, former minister of war and ardent nationalist, who was in office during the early part of the Manchurian campaign and at the time of the Shanghai fighting.

Once Gen. Mazaki was forced out, it was quite natural that the minister of war should make a clean sweep of his party and eliminate the faction from the army. Therein lies the explanation of the extensive revision of military personnel, involving approximately 3,500 officers of all ranks. After the resignation of Gen. Mazaki, the most outstanding resignation, or retirement, is that of Lieut. Gen. Shinji Hatta, who was in command of the gendarmerie headquarters when Premier Ki Inukai was assassinated by a group of young officers and cadets May 15, 1932, and an extensive plot to terrorize Tokyo bared. The plotters sought refuge with the gendarmerie, and the public feels that they received it. Gen. Hatta has for some time been one of the most outspoken upholders of the Japanese version of a Fascist form of government. The other retirements, two of them from the supreme war council, accomplished the war minister's purpose and the Araki group is today without influence in military circles.

THE House of Peers, according to the Rengo News Agency, holds that the factionalism which has existed in the army has been responsible for social unrest in Japan, and that its elimination now will also end that unrest. The general public feels that its military leaders are once again acting as a unit and that therefore strength has been restored.

One of the best informed Japanese on army affairs, one who, although a civilian, is on intimate terms with all of the higher army officials and who is on the "inside," believes that the minister of war is in no sense attempting to oust one faction in favor of a faction of his own. Rather, he says, Gen. Hayashi's sole aim is to eliminate all factionalism from the army and make it a truly unified organ. At one time the faction of Gen. Kazushige Ugaki, now governor general of Korea, was in control, and then the pendulum swung violently in the other direction and the Araki group was dominant. What Gen. Hayashi now seeks to do is to oust all factionalism, to favor neither one side nor the other, and to bring the pendulum to rest at true mid-center.

Still another interpretation to be heard in Tokyo is that the recent changes will result in greater liberalism in the army's policy. It is reasonable to expect this in view of the past record of the minister of war and his present activity in striving to bring harmony to army circles again, but certain it is that the drastic and sweeping changes which have taken place are as important to Japan as would be similar changes in the civilian governments of most of the nations of the world.

Senate Speeds Tax Bill as Key To Adjourning

sisted, "these tax proposals are in direct line with our tax policies since the income tax law was passed in 1914."

Whether or not Republicans have many amendments to offer, a number already are framed on the Democratic side, and ready for the hopper.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, will offer an amendment to tax all now tax-exempt securities, a proposition favored by the President in his tax message to Congress.

This was left out of the tax bill both in the House and in the Senate, on the theory that a constitutional amendment would be needed. Clark took issue with this school of thought.

"There is nothing in the Constitution which prohibits our reaching these issues," he insisted.

"Dummy" Report Filed.

Although a "dummy" report on the Senate Finance Committee's tax bill was filed with the Senate Monday night, only the text of the bill itself was made available yesterday. The report itself will be printed this morning just before the Senate plunges into debate on the tax measure.

Publication of the committee's bill yesterday disclosed taxes on personal holding companies, not hitherto revealed. The amendment, designed to prevent evasion of proposed individual surtaxes, imposes a surtax starting at 20 per cent upon undistributed and adjusted net income of personal holding companies not in excess of $2,000, and ranging to 60 per cent on over $1,000,000. The present personal holding company surtax rates levy 30 per cent up to $100,000, and 40 per cent after that.

This amendment, designed to prevent persons in the higher individual income brackets from organizing holding companies to avoid taxation, will yield no additional revenue.

La Follette Schedule Up.

With little chance of success, Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, will again offer his broad schedule of income surtaxes reaching down as low as $3,000. The amendment was approved by the Finance Committee on Saturday, but rejected on Monday. Administration Democrats are resolved to defeat it, and there is a split in the Progressive bloc over the proposal, with Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, leading the opposition.

Speculation turned on a fight over the inheritance tax schedule approved by the House, but turned down in the Finance Committee. The President is said to prefer the House schedule, and it will probably be offered as a Senate amendment.

High lights of the Finance Committee's bill are:

Surtaxes starting at 60 per cent on $1,000,000 incomes and ranging to 75 per cent on over $10,000,000.

Graduated estates taxes, ranging from 2 per cent on the first taxable $10,000 to 70 per cent on over $50,000,000; a tax on gifts approximating three-fourths of the estates tax proposal.

Graduated corporation income taxes, starting with 12½ per cent on net income up to $15,000, and climbing to 15½ per cent on income over $100,000.

Tax on 15 per cent of dividends received by one corporation from another, averaging 2 per cent of dividend income.

Don't Mention It.

The Choice

By H. G. Wells

In the current issue of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Wells contributes an article entitled "Civilization on Trial." Following are excerpts from his concluding paragraphs.

PROBABLY the greatest single body of mentality, so to speak, in the world today is the English-speaking community. I suppose that in the English-speaking community there are more people who read and write and talk than there are in any other community of thought in the world. Part of that community is in the United States, part in Britain, and smaller parts are scattered about in Canada, South Africa, Australia and so forth. It seems to me a most lamentable and astonishing thing that behind our common language we have not got a common idea of what we are going to attempt to do with the world in the years ahead.

Is it not possible for the English-speaking communities to begin getting together upon the answers to some of the financial riddles, the economic riddles and the political riddles that paralyze us?

• • • •

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT told me when I saw him in Washington about something that has been happening on the border between the United States and Canada. At the eastern end of the border there has been a good deal of smuggling along the old side roads, where it is easy for a truck or lorry to slip from one country into the other. To meet this situation the American Government started an air patrol to watch these back roads, and the Canadians were going to start another, when some bright spirit, I don't know who it was, said, "Why have two services?" And what is happening now on the Canadian-United States border is that there is an air service which is looking for smugglers, and in the airplane sit a Canadian policeman and an American policeman, and that airplane can come down on either side of the border and make an arrest in the interest of Canada or in the interest of the United States.

Suppose someone saw the opportunity for this sort of thing on a larger scale. Suppose someone saw the possibility of having the United States fleet in the Pacific and the British fleet in the Atlantic, instead of having a British fleet in the Pacific and an American fleet in the Pacific, and a British fleet in the Atlantic and an American fleet in the Atlantic. Is it impossible? What makes it impossible? What divergence of purpose stands in the way?

• • • •

UNLESS men can get outside their national limitations, and unless they can tackle economic and financial and monetary problems with something bigger than their national equipment, I think it is not a question of centuries but of decades before we see our civilization going down. And it will not be for the first time.

The problem is to make peace successful. If peace is not successful, if war intervenes, it will be due entirely to the fact that under existing conditions we are not able to utilize our surplus energy, to employ our idle hands, in any other way to make life satisfactory and interesting. Failing the release of energy that would come from making peace successful, we will collapse into war. The way to get rid of war is not by leagues. The energies for war go on accumulating just the same.

• • • •

THE only thing to do is to invent a successful form of peace. That means a new sort of life for human beings. The choice before us is war or a new world—a rational liberal collectivist world with an ever rising standard of life and an ever bolder collective enterprise, in science, in art, in every department of living. Because so far we have not shown the intellectual power and vigor to take the higher, more difficult way, because we have not had sense enough to discover what to do with our accumulation of social energy, is why at the present time we are drifting and sliding back toward destruction. If humanity fails, it will fail for the lack of organized mental effort and for no other reason.

Statement on War Pensions

Text of the White House statement explaining the reasons which actuated the President in signing the bill restoring pensions to veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Boxer Rebellion and the Philippine Insurrection follows:

The President, in signing today H. R. 6995, a bill re-enacting laws dealing with pensions granted to veterans and the dependents of veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection and the Boxer Rebellion, made clear the definite distinction between legislation relating to veterans of early wars and the veterans of the World War.

The Congress on many occasions has recognized that because of the complete absence of any system or policy initiated during or immediately following the Civil War, the Indian wars and the Spanish-American War, and because of lack of adequate medical care from the point of view of modern standards, the veterans of these earlier wars could be compensated and taken care of only through some form of pension system.

In the case of the World War, however, the Congress at the very beginning of the war adopted an entirely new system of care and benefits. This new system applied to all who fought in the World War, extended to them additional compensation if they had dependents, as well as insurance, hospitalization, vocational rehabilitation and the adjusted service certificate (the bonus).

The veterans of the Spanish American War, now approaching an average age of 62 years, had none of these advantages except hospitalization in recent years. Their case, therefore, can not be compared to the case of World War veterans. For the same reason the approval of this bill establishes no ground or precedent for pensions for the World War group; theirs is an entirely different case.

There are some inequalities involved in this legislation but the President recognizes the fact that the Spanish American veterans were once on the rolls, under prior legislation, that they are approaching advanced age, that their disabilities are increasing.

The President's action today is taken appropriately on the anniversary date of the occupation of Manila by the American forces.

isting facilities. Of the 8,800 proposed accommodations and beds, 6,835 will be for mental cases.

This veterans' expansion program comprises 38 separate projects located in 29 States, generally distributed around the country. Included in the program is an additional 164 beds for neuro-psychiatric cases at the hospital at Perry Point, Md., at a cost of $300,000; 492 beds for the same types of cases at the hospital at Roanoke, Va. at a cost of $900,000 and the replacement of facilities for 500 general medical patients at the hospital at Hampton, Va., at a cost of $750,000.

Action on Anniversary.

Acting, incidentally, on the anniversary date of the occupation of Manila by American forces, President Roosevelt's approval of the bill restoring the Spanish War and other veterans related to that conflict to the pension came as a surprise to those who believed he would fight this further encroachment of the veterans into his economy act, already badly battered.

Hines had opposed the measure when it was before Congressional committees and Administration leaders in the Senate made futile efforts to modify the bill's provisions. In addition, the President has taken the stand that he would not approve any expenditures outside of the budget, unless Congress took steps to provide coresponding revenue.

The President twice had Hines and Bell prepare data for him. They called the second time to confer with him Monday. All of this led to the belief the President would veto the measure, even if it appeared fairly certain Congress would override the veto.

Mr. Roosevelt apparently, however, did not think the gesture of standing by his economy act worth another defeat on Capitol Hill and a further slap at the organized veterans. A year ago, however, he was willing to encounter both these difficulties to preserve some substance to the economy act when he vetoed the independent offices appropriation bill to which Congress had attached a rider restoring in part Federal pay cuts and benefits for veterans at a cost of $228,000,000. Congress passed the bill over his veto.

Pledge Behind Effort.

The economy act represented a substantial effort on the part of the President to fulfill his campaign pledge to reduce Federal expenses. It was held to be necessary at the time to keep unimpaired the credit of the United States Government, on which it was contended, rested the safety of bank deposits, the security of insurance policies, economy recovery and the stability of the whole economic fabric.

The President and the administrator of veterans' affairs were given broad powers to reduce Government expenses, especially in the matter of veterans' compensation. It was estimated at the time that $460,000,000 annually might be saved on veterans' compensation. This figure, however, was never reached since the first regulations were liberalized as a consequence of protests. It was estimated that the savings effected totaled about $300,000,000 annually.

The greatest blow to the objects of the economy act came in March, 1934, when Congress in the independent offices appropriation bill restored 75 per cent of the so-called "presumptive" cases to the benefit rolls. The "presumptive" cases comprised those veterans whose disabilities were "presumed" to have resulted from the war because they developed within 6 years after the close of the war.

Other Savings Cut.

Over the President's opposition Congress also whittled down the savings made through reducing the salaries of Government workers. The first reduction ordered was 15 per cent. This was reduced to 10 per cent and then 5 per cent. This latter reduction was wiped out during the last winter. The salary cuts were intended temporarily during the fiscal crisis. The reductions in veterans' compensation, however, were intended to be permanent.

The final blow to the economy act came yesterday with the signing of the Spanish-American War pension bill. There remain in effect several minor provisions of the economy act, but they are regarded as inconsequential in comparison with the original purposes of the measure.

The act restores pensions to 37,368 veterans of the Spanish War, Boxer Rebellion and Philippine Insurrection and 11,220 widows and other dependents of such veterans. In brief it re-enacts the pension scales which were approved in 1930. Average monthly payments of the bill would be $42.85.

'Judging Stars' Winners Liven Habana Show

For Old Tunes, Listen In on Milt Davis' Band at the Hamilton.

By Chanticleer.

The folks really gathered in at Club Habana Monday night . . . which is the night Maurice Kafka and Papa Rudy Schramm bring the "Judging the Stars" winners up for a little impromptu show.

There was Audrey Seiber . . who, everybody knows, is mistress of ceremonies at the Thirteenth street movie emporium . . . and Bert Granoff (erstwhile Bagranoff) . . . and Fred Shawn, program director of the National Broadcasting Co

And just to prove I'm a sentimental sort of person I celebrated Paul's birthday the same night. Paul's birthday really was this time last month. But I never had celebrated it before, so Paul and I decided there was no better time than Monday night. And you'd never believe it, but Paul is 50. When you get that friendly greeting at the Roof next time, look closely and see if he appears to be within ten years of two score and ten.

* * * *

If you like old songs—popular songs and ballads and swell tunes from the old music shows—Milt Davis, directing the band at the Rainbow Room at the Hamilton, is your man. I sat with Milt the other evening for half an hour and we played a most delightful game. We tried to see who could name an old tune of which the other couldn't hum at least a bit of the chorus.

And Milt is putting those tunes into his dance groups for the Rainbow Room's dancing . . . playing them slow and sweet. It's been going on now for a couple of weeks and the customers take to it. I hope they continue to, although, as Milt says, the break may come any time and a demand made for the latest, hottest hot-cha. May that time never come! There should be one spot where the old tunes are the only tunes played, and little Milton and his boys are plenty good at it.

The profession of fiddle bows and drum sticks lost a decision to the memory of Buffalo Bill this week.

For several days a little fellow by the name of Dickinson has been a faithful worshiper at the shrine of the bass drum and traps at the Powhatan Roof. All the didoes executed by Irving Levick, Pete Macia's drummer, were watched intently.

Mr. and Mrs. Dickinson, and the youngster's grandmother, too, are staying at the Powhatan, coming to Washington from their home in the West. In fact, when Master Dickinson first arrived he wore chaps in traditional wild west fashion.

The pay-off came Monday night when some one said to the miniature cowboy: "I'll bet I know what you'll be when you grow up."

"What?" asked Master Dickinson, not taking his eyes off Irving Levick's fly swatter skithering over the drum head.

"A drummer in a band."

"Nope," says sophisticated Master Dickinson. "I thought for awhile it was okay—but I'm going right back out West and be a cowboy."

* * * *

Bill Merriam phones to say that Mary Chrysler, of the triple-tap soft shoe dancing Chryslers, hasn't had a solitary "lay-off" in the show business for three years . . . and William solemnly advises that it's quite a feat. If it had been any one but Bill Merriam, I'd have thought the soft shoe dancing and the feat were being pushed over as a bad, very bad, midsummer pun.

Be that as it may, you'll find out why Mary Chrysler hasn't gone a day in three years without an engagement when you see her across the pool on the platform at Maryland Club Gardens this week. And keep your eye on that triple-tap soft-shoe number. By the by, Belle Regis has been held over for another week. She sings from the balcony and the gondola.

* * * *

A couple of weeks ago I thought Milt Barrett's story about having the "world's greatest acrobatic dancer" at the Dude Rranch was a little optimistic. But my, my! The way the customers act up when Verne Wilcox does those difficult whatyoumaycallits is terrific. In an ordinary dance turn, the little acrobatic dancer does "splits" in the same way you've seen them done time and again before. But Verne figured up some new ways. Host Barrett says she is the greatest attraction he's ever had at the Dude Ranch. An there's also Peggy Paige, torch singer and dancer; Dolly Dare, hostess and blues singer; Dick Bea (Bay, to you) who is a swell bea-rytone. Dance to Ralph Garren's orchestra.

Judy's back at the Lotus. And the Society Steppers have been held over this week and Al Norton is having himself a time as master of affairs . . . and all is well. Judy Ellington returned from her vacation looking pert and pretty and singing most pleasingly. It's a grand revue show. Don't miss it.

* * * *

St. Clair and Day have arrived with us, direct from a successful run at the New Yorker in the Big City. They're at the Shoreham Terrace, doing an individual interpretation of the rhumba, passo double and original "rhapsodie." And don't put off seeing them soon because they open in London on September 12. Then there's also Terry Green, whose High Kick number brings the folks up cheering . . . and a screaming novelty tagged "Pluto—the Wonder Horse." I should spoil it by telling you about it. (Note from Barnee: The Piccolino from "Top Hat" is in great demand by the dancers. I predict it soon will pass "You're All I Need" as a request number.)

* * * *

Don't forget, the Hangar Club is the place from 2 to dawn . . . with Cecil Ellington and his band playing from early evening until the people all go home . . . the S. S. Potomac leaves every evening at 7:45 for a grand cruise down the river with dancing the piece de resistance . . . and for a dinner in the country try Griffith Farms, out the Marlboro pike.

Lots of Seidlers—And Very Pretty, Too

Creditors of Brewery Elect Quinter Trustee

Operation of the Abner Drury Brewing Co., Inc., for at least six months was assured yesterday when creditors of the bankrupt corporation, which merely leased the property, elected Ralph D. Quinter as trustee to supervise the plant. The bankrupt company rented the property from the Abner Drury Co.

In an announcement concerning the renewal of operations, the creditors said they hope to operate the brewery until a permanent reorganization is effected.

Board to Hear Views.

Havens and Martin, of Richmond, Va., operators of Station WMBG, were given permission by the Communications Commission today to take part in a hearing of the application of Station WPHR for removal to Richmond, according to the Associated Press. They were denied, however, the right to intervene in an application for transfer of the control of Station WPHR.

Chin Problem Is Easily Met By Strap Mold

New Device Strengthens Muscles and Avoids Sagging, Plumpness.

By Dudley Harmon,
Pinch Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

THE AVERAGE WOMAN turning 40 finds herself face to face with the chin problem. Whether she's thin or fat makes little difference, for in either case queer things start happening around her chin and neck. If she is of the scrawny type, the muscles will begin to sag and the skin to wrinkle.

And what a shame to let a chin date one like this, when it could so easily be avoided. There is literally no excuse for chin trouble these days, when scientific discoveries have revealed the secret of a firm and youthful chin.

On sale at a local department store is a combined head mold and chin strap which really accomplishes a triple purpose. It keeps the chin under control, prevents your wave from coming out, and keeps cold cream from oozing into your eyes after a facial.

The band is made of silk lastex, which has many of the reducing qualities of rubber, but which doesn't bind or heat. It strengthens the chin muscles and prevents them from getting flabby and weak. It also helps to do away with excess flesh. Worn regularly every night, this contraption should accomplish wonders toward giving you that youthful look.

One part of the band can be adjusted to keep the wave in place at night. There is no danger of its slipping off at night, as the ordinary net so often does, and you won't wake up to find it somewhere on the floor. It really does hold your locks firmly in place. It comes in two sizes, priced at 50 cents and $1.

Flannel Robes for Fall.

WITH FALL practically staring us in the face, it will soon be time to discard the light negligee for a thick, warm, and wooly bathrobe.

A downtown store has some specials in bathrobes this month which should see you comfortably through many a long winter evening. Tailored, with mannish-looking lapels, these are as smart as they are comfortable. The material is a wool-flannel.

White braid around lapels and pockets adds to the style of these little numbers. The pockets are great roomy affairs, big enough to hold quantities of handkerchiefs. The robes come in all sorts of delectable colors. One which particularly struck our fancy is made up in a deep shade of rose, very youthful and flattering.

Girls who are going away to school or college will be particularly interested in these robes. College heating systems sometimes aren't all they should be in the small hours of the morning, when one is wrestling with Socrates or Plato, but one need never fear the cold wrapped snugly in one of these. They cost $3.95.

Portable Shower Device.

THE MANUFACTURERS are certainly making it easy for bathers this year. Some time ago we wrote of a shoulder shower which could be attached to the faucet, and which had all the advantages of a regular shower. Now comes the news that another company has put out a sprinkler arrangement which can be carried from place to place and attached anywhere. At one end is an arrangement which fits any faucet, and at the other is the spray through which the water comes. In the middle is a vacuum affair which allows the apparatus to be attached to any part of the wall desired.

Thus, it is particularly ideal for shampooing, as you can manipulate the nozzle in any direction you wish. When used for an all-over bath, it keeps the hair dry. This arrangement is fun for the kiddies, too, for it can be attached to a faucet on the wall of a house and presto! you have a sprinkler which the children will adore.

Feminine Tact Required To Help Needy Families

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. EMMA SECHREST SMITH, assistant chief clerk of the Florida House of Representatives, describes woman's place in resettlement work in the South.

Mrs. Emma S. Smith, Florida Legislator, Tells of Agrarian Aid in South; Recipients Quick to Resent Unsympathetic Attitude, She Says.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

RESETTLEMENT projects, whereby living conditions of persons in rural communities are being improved, are now claiming much attention in the South. Just what part can a woman play in this work of helping poverty-stricken farmers and their families take a new lease on life?

This question was answered yesterday by Mrs. Emma Sechrest Smith, assistant chief clerk of the Florida House of Representatives, who has had wide experience as a teacher, newspaper woman and business executive in her home State. Mrs. Smith is now visiting Washington.

Discussing resettlement work in the South, she pointed out that 'it faces even more difficult problems than those confronting our forefather of the covered-wagon era. Comparatively few persons today have that boundless ambition and rugged spirit that sustained the pioneers who conquered the land and made Nature work for them," she continued. "Resettlement workers will face persons who have battled against proverty and misfortune until ambition has given way to resignation."

Task Suitable to Women.

Helping these people to attain a higher plane, a mode of living that will enable them, their children and their associates to become better citizens is a task peculairly suited to women, Mrs. Smith believes.

"The intuition and tact of women, who from personal contact and association understand these people, will be most helpful," she said. "They must be approached with care; help must be offered in such a manner that they will not feel the sting of 'charity,' lest more harm than good is done."

In this connection she pointed out that the greatest benefit would result through inspiring these people to build better homes, provide balanced diets and educational advantages for their children, and provide for themselves some of the simple pleasures that make home what it should be.

Houses With "Dog Trots."

In contrast to the "home as it should be," Mrs. Schrest described some typical dwellings in rural Florida. These are generally one or two room houses with a "dog trot" through the center, she explained. "In this alleyway stands the family's supreme offering to Southern hospitality — straight home-made chairs, the rear legs of which have been sawed short to facilitate leaning against the walls," she continued. "The floors are usually bare, there is often a leaky roof, and the shuttered windows as a rule have no screens for protection from mosquitoes and flies."

Strangers entering such a home would encounter a somewhat cool, defiant attitude on the part of every member of the family, she averred.

"The problem, then, is to win their confidence, and that is no easy task, for any apparent lack of sympathy on the part of the re-settlement worker would be quickly sensed," she went on. "For this reason the worker who approaches the task from the standpoint of 'the day's work and pay' has no place in an undertaking of this nature. The uncanny instinct of the natives is quick to discern a lack of understanding, and as a result to raise a barrier that is difficult, if not impossible, to overcome."

Women Can Judge Desirability.

"It is generally conceded that men are better judges of the quality of soil," she went on, "but an experienced woman is more competent to determine the desirability of a location from a social standpoint. In view of this, the services of both experienced men and women could be used in working out satisfactory answers to such questions as these: Will the land in question produce grain for meat and bread, and also fresh vegetables? Is the present location of the home a healthful one? Is it near a school? Should the family be moved to a better location, a community center where schools, places of worship and a community center house are readily accessible?

The most difficult problem of all lies in persuading families to move where environments are better, Mrs. Smith said. "This is where the resettlement worker needs the highest degree of tact and understanding. The transition from poverty, illiteracy and unhealthful locations and surroundings must be promoted by workers who know and understand these people; who will assist in guarding them from the disastrous effects of a sudden change until old roots have taken hold in new soil and a solid foundation has been laid for a comfortable and prosperous home life. That, it seems to me, is a work in which women, with their characteristic intuition and tact, should be particularly successful."

Children Often Conceal Pain With Silence

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

CHILDREN will often suffer pain in silence, when, for reasons of their own, they find it pays.

Mary, playing with a baseball in the house—a forbidden practice—was struck on her collarbone by a "swift one." For days she brushed her hair with her left hand and used her right arm very sparingly. She was nearly grown before it was found that she had injured her collar-bone.

Susan was given a pair of shoes which had belonged to her cousin. They were the nicest she had ever owned, and not for worlds would she have admitted that they hurt her feet. She developed a deep corn which was a blemish, and a painful one, most of her life.

The youngsters are so secretive and so Spartan in their self-control when they want to be that it requires more than ordinary insight to know whether there is any trouble.

If the active child suddenly becomes quiet, the talkative child stops chattering, the mischievous child turns over a new leaf over night, the gregarious youngster takes to solitude, it is time to prick up one's ears and look for the cause of the change.

It may well be merely a new phase or development, but is likely to be rooted in some secret difficulty, either mental or physical. Direct questioning is useless, for even if the answer is found, the child's confidence given grudgingly is generally useless. Tact, patience and sympathy are the only means of getting at the child. And the secret, once it is learned, must be treated with respect, and not made an object of ridicule or a cause for punishment.

High School Graduate Who Is "Thinking of Going to Work" Asks Advice on "How to Go About It;" Feels Unprepared.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have been reading your column for some time now and think your advice is very good. So I should like to hear it concerning my own problem. In June I graduated from high school. I should like very much to go to college or to some business school but my parents are unable to help me financially. Neither have I friends or other relatives from whom I could get such help. My education, having been received in rural schools, will be of little help to me in the business world.

* * * *

I have been thinking of going to work, but, realizing how unprepared I am, I am in more or less of a quandary. I am not, however, going to let my unpreparedness make me a coward and self-conscious. I am willing to start my fight against the world, but I can't decide how to go about it. I will welcome and appreciate any advice from you. I should like to have your answer immediately, as much depends upon it. Yours truly,

V. E. C.

Talk to Local Educators.

DEAR V. E. C.: Why don't you take your problem to the teacher who showed most interest in your progress during your senior year in high school? No doubt he or she is away on vacation now, but you might learn the address and state your case in a letter, or else await the teacher's return for the beginning of the autumn semester. If you feel no mental kinship with any of your former teachers, you might approach the high school superintendent, or the county superintendent. These persons as a rule have a thorough knowledge of, as well as a certain influence in, community affairs. If you made a good enough record as a student to justify their giving you an interesting recommendation, they will no doubt be pleased to provide you with introductions which may bring you the help you need. Also, out of their knowledge of the educational system, they may be able to suggest a way of obtaining higher education through working out the tuition expenses.

* * * *

I disagree with your statement that a rural school education can be of no benefit to the student who hopes to succeed in the business world. That's simply a foolish, unwarrantedly apologetic notion. Equally erroneous is your idea that to grow up and take one's place in the world is, necessarily, to 'fight against the world." Since you are pleased to think of it in terms of a contest, why not as an absorbing game of skill—with yourself against the world and each friendly to the other throughout?

* * * *

If circumstances should prove to be such that you must take your place in the business world without further academic education, that is no reason for despair; hardly even good reason to be discouraged. As a matter of fact, surveys have been made and arguments have been waged in attempts to prove or disprove the necessity of a college training for success in life. The subject is very much open to debate.

* * * *

The young person with brains and character who has made good use of his high school opportunities is adequately qualified to fend for himself. It's mostly a question of knowing what one hopes to accomplish and co-ordinating one's efforts to that end. Where more education is needed, the enterprising man or woman gets it, by working and saving for the sabbatical years of study; by attending night school, by study at home, or similar expedient.

* * * *

It has been said that "the world stands aside for the man who knows where he is going."

Parents Must Aid Child to Talk

If a child is slow in learning to talk, parents should do something about it instead of waiting for him to outgrow the affliction, says Dr. Sara Stinchfield Hawk, of the University of Southern California. Many children with delayed speech are found to have hearing difficulties, she points out.

"The favorable time for speech training, with the child who is not responding to speech stimuli, amid social situations, is between the ages of 2 and 3 years," said Dr. Hawk. "If one waits until school age, much important time has been lost, and the child may even be permanently retarded."

Smocks Supplant the Apron In Both Service and Charm

Pattern No. 972.

HOW THE SMOCK HAS TRAVELED! From the peasant farms to American artists, from studio to kitchen, kitchen to office, office to school. It is more practical than an apron, and much more charming.

This pattern, for instance, may make little Jane's painting garb, mother's cooking costume, and big sister's "dress-saver" at the office. It has deep patch pockets and gathers below the yoke, a large flat collar and tie, a choice of sleeves, an optional belt. Cotton broadcloth, percale, linen, printed cotton, gingham and shantung are suitable fabrics. The pattern is cut in sizes 6 to 20, each size guaranteed accurate. Size 14 (32) requires 4⅛ yards of 35-inch fabric and ¾ yard for contrast.

Chinese Womans 'Youth' Not All a Mental Feat

Paraffin Cream Helps Cover Wrinkles and Smooth Skin.

ONE BEAUTY secret of the Chinese women—how to avoid wrinkles—has long been a matter of curiosity on the part of Occidental women. Feminine visitors to China unfailingly envy the smooth amber-like skins which prevail even among the older women.

One explanation advanced for this has been that Chinese women never worry about age. In China years are a symbol of respect and power and no woman is supposed to dread getting old. Because she does not fear crows' feet, she does not get them.

However, a more material explanation is advanced by Mary Knight, United Press correspondent, who has been doing some research in Hongkong concerning Chinese beauty practices. She says:

"Most of the creams and lotions used by the older Chinese to make their skins look like glistening amber either have paraffin or zinc in them. This gives the waxey smoothness, which scraped off as often as not reveals an ugly corrugated skin."

The smooth glistening hair effect achieved by Chinese women also is explained by Miss Knight. She says:

"The women comb and plaster their hair with a gum from a tree called the pau fa. Bark off the trunk is cut into strips and boiled until the gum begins to ooze out. Hours of soaking will do the same thing more slowly if boiling is not convenient. It is odorous and practically guarantees to eat most of the hair off the front of the head."

As to the Chinese woman's decoration, she writes:

"All Chinese women wear earrings. They would no more be caught without rings in their ears than we would go barefoot to church. They have a marvelous sense of color and always select some flower or bit of carved jade, ivory or coral that matches the floral design of their long slashed-to-the-knee gowns. Bracelets and bangles are second nature to them, too, and many of the coolies and poorest Chinese women wear jade bracelets on each wrist. The children wear them on their ankles."

Fruit Soup MENUS for Today

By Dorothea Duncan.

TAKING jellied consomme right out of the top spot for summer appetizer honors are these intriguing fruit soups. They can be served hot, but are much more refreshing on a warm day when served cold with cracked ice. A few whole red berries or pieces of fresh fruit, or a spot of whipped cream may be added.

Fruit soup can be made from any meaty fruit, such as grapes, blackberries, oranges, cherries, currants, raspberries, apricots, peaches or plums.

Force enough of the particular fruit through a coarse strainer, using a silver spoon, to make three cups of puree. Put the fruit puree in one quart of cold water, boil 5 minutes and then strain. Add enough water to this to make a quart. Add the juice and grated rind each of one-half lemon and orange and two tablespoons of sugar. Then add two tablespoons of cornstarch softened in one-half cup cold water and a stick of cinnamon. Boil until thick, stirring constantly and adding more water to keep a thick sirup.

BREAKFAST.
Half cantaloupe

Tuberculosis Of Shin Affects Entire System

Infection Usually Appears on Face in Shape of Butterfly.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IN our study of disease we are realizing more and more that few infections are purely local, that is, a scratch on the finger may lead to a blood stream invasion with destruction of tissue in all the important organs of the body.

One of the most stubborn forms of human infection with this widespread organism is tuberculosis of the skin, called lupus vulgaris—the word "lupus" meaning "the wolf."

The bacillus gains entrance to the skin through abrasions or breaks in the outer layer, although the disease may be spread from tuberculous glands or sinuses. Not infrequently a blood stream infection carries the organisms to skin capillaries.

Appears on Face.

Lupus vulgaris is more common on the face, although the skin of the extremities and various parts of the body may be involved. The disorder begins on the cheek or about the nose, and the first evidence is often a minute, dark appearing nodule or a purplish area. The patch gradually extends, absorbing tissue as it goes. Because of destruction of the tissue beneath the skin the face may be distorted and deformed. At first there is considerable swelling, later followed by the appearance of crusts, and unless prompt treatment is instituted marked deformities of the features usually result.

Extensions of the disease from the skin to the mucous membrane of the nose, lips, mouth, palate, and tongue sometimes occur.

Treatment Developed.

Only within recent years has treatment been reasonably successful. Following the brilliant discoveries of Niels Finsen on the importance of ultraviolet light in the cure of skin tuberculosis, new hopes were aroused. The objective in the light treatment is to bring about an inflammatory reaction designed to destroy the disease process and promote healing. Ultraviolet from the carbon arc lamp is most effective. Large doses will be required and the period of treatment is six months or longer.

In a long series of cases in which the Finsen light was used 60 per cent were permanently cured, that is, the treated patients had been free from the disease for several years.

We must recall that the disease generally begins in childhood and is more frequent in girls than in boys. Insufficient food, a poorly balanced diet, and lack of sunlight are important factors. Prompt recognition and early treatment are necessary if we would avoid deformities and unsightly scarring.

Virginia Delays Parkway Action For U. S. Forms

Department of Interior Is Drafting Deeds; Options Held on Most Links.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 13.—The State highway department is waiting on deed forms being drafted by Interior Department officials at Washington before acquiring the remaining rights of way on the first two sections of the Shenandoah-Great Smoky parkway, Chairman H. G. Shirley said today.

Options have been obtained on all rights of way on the first section from Jarmans Gap, the proposed southern end of the Skyline drive, to Swannanoa, except for a mile and a half stretch through the Gray Barnhart property. Shirley said condemnation proceedings would be instituted soon if a settlement could not be reached.

The only right of way not under option on the second section, south of Waynesboro, is on the Elk Mountain estate of Mrs. George Cole Scott, but Shirley predicted an agreement would be reached on this link.

Outcome of the Via case which is expected to be decided by the Supreme Court in October, may influence the parkway project, Shirley said. This case, brought by a property owner in Shenandoah Park, will decide whether the State can acquire property by condemnation for the purpose of transferring the deed to the Federal Government.

The highway commissioner expressed confidence, however, that the State could transfer to Federal agencies the rights of way on the parkway and the project would be completed as contemplated.

He said no time had been set for actual construction to begin. Assistant Park Director Tolson of the National Park Service said at Washington today he did not expect work to begin on the Virginia side until next spring, though the service and the Public Roads Bureau are ready to begin construction of a 12½-mile stretch in Norht Carolina.

Court Approves Sanitation Move

Judge Smith Gives Assent to Plea for District.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 13.—Judge Lemuel F. Smith, of the Circuit Court, verbally approved yesterday a petition creating a sanitary district in the Frys Spring area, south of the city limits, but withheld entering the order or setting the boundaries of the area until a survey is made.

At the hearing yesterday, L. W. Waddell, representing residents of Jefferson Park, which was originally included in the petition, said persons living in this area did not wish to be included in the district. He explained that with one exception the 19 home owners in this area objected to entering in the district because they had purchased the property from the Redland Corporation with the understanding that this corporation would provide sewage disposal facilities.

Judge Smtih ordered a survey of the whole area made under the supervision of the Health Department and also a separate survey of the area which the residents desire not to be included. When this is done the court will decide upon the boundaries of the district.

Barbara Unhurt In Auto Mishap; Bound for Paris

To Confer With Mdivani Kin; Takes 67 Bags and 7 Servants.

By the Associated Press.

Copenhagen, Aug. 13.—The former Barbara Hutton, whose divorced husband, Prince Alexis Mdivani, was killed August 1 in an automobile accident, emerged unscathed from one today.

An automobile occupied by Barbara and her husband, Count von Haugwitz-Reventlow, collided with another shortly after the couple set out for Paris. Both machines were slightly damaged, but no one was injured.

Barbara and her husband left his Danish country castle for Paris, where Barbara will meet brothers and sisters of the late Prince Alexis. It was understood they would decide upon division of his estate.

Seven servants and 67 pieces of luggage went along to Paris with the newlyweds. An unconfirmed rumor was that Barbara tipped servants at the Hardenberg Castle of her husband, $2,000.

Jose Maria Sert, painter and brother-inlaw of Prince Alexis, said in Gerona, Spain, that the fortune of the prince, estimated at $2,000,000 to $5,000,000, was entirely intact.

D. C. Troops Are Banned In Maryland

Division Commander Countermands Order for Cascade Camp.

Fear of Parlaysis Spread Causes Objections by Health Officers.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 13.—Plans for the concentration of the Twenty-ninth Division National Guard for maneuvers in either Maryland or Pennsylvania were completely disrupted today as a result of the infantile paralysis epidemic current in Virginia.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the division, which includes Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and the District of Columbia, issued an order here today denying previously granted authority for Virginia and District units to train at the Maryland National Guard camp at Cascade.

Sharp protests from health officials at Frederick and other points in the State, who feared a spread of the epidemic into Maryland, resulted in a rescinding of the earlier order, Gen. Reckord said.

Pennsylvania health authorities refused to allow Virginia and District troops to cross the State borders and participate in troop movements at Mount Gretna, Pa., and it had been hoped concentration at Cascade, near the border, would partially offset the situation.

Health Officers Object.

The first order, issued early today, allowed the encampment at Cascade, but was superseded later after Gen. Reckord studied protests from Dr. E. C. Kefauver, Frederick city and county health officer, as well as other officials.

Cascade is located in Frederick County.

As a result of the popular objection, new orders denying use of the camp to one Virginia Field Artillery unit and one D. C. engineer unit were issued.

Under new arrangements, District Guardsmen will train at Camp Sims, inside the Washington boundary line, while the field artillery unit will encamp at a point yet unnamed.

It was pointed out that the encampment at Virginia Beach, where infantry units have been located, will be too crowded to include artillerymen.

Efforts will be made on paper to include the two banned units in general strategy at Mount Gretna, Gen. Reckord said, but actually the Guardsmen will have little connection with the larger maneuvers.

The units were to have moved to Cascade Saturday.

New Camp Sites Set.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 13.—Adjt. Gen. S. Gardner Waller announced this afternoon that Virginia National Guardsmen, barred successively from Pennsylvania and Maryland because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in this State, would train at Virginia Beach and at Front Royal in the Shenandoah Valley.

About 3,000 men, Gen. Waller said, would encamp at the Coast military reservation. The units to be ordered there include the Ninety-first Infantry Brigade, containing the First and 116th Regiments, the Twenty-ninth Tank Corps, the 110th Hospital Unit, the Twenty-ninth Signal Corps, and the 110th Ambulance Corps.

Two organizations, the 111th Field Artillery and Headquarters Battery of the Fifty-fourth Field Artillery Brigade, comprising about 600 men, will move by truck to Front Royal, where they will camp about a mile outside the town.

The military units going there will depend on Front Royal for water, lights and sanitary facilities, Gen. Waller said. The southern branch of the Shenandoah River will be used for swimming.

The troops will move into camp Saturday for their two-week summer training period.

Cases Total 393

The final decision to train Virginia's militiamen in the State was made as 14 new cases of infantile paralysis were registered by the State health department, bringing to 393 the total since July 1, of which 147 have been recorded in August.

Today's reports were received as follows: Albemarle, 3; Augusta, 2; Bedford, 1; Fauquier, 1; Goochland, 1; Nelson, 1; Prince Edward, 1; Prince William, 1; Norfolk City, 1; Petersburg City, 2.

Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, however, pointed out that last week's total was 66 cases, as compared with 100 the previous week, indicating that the disease was definitely on the wane.

Dr. Riggin advised that public schools proceed with plans for opening in September.

Dr. Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction, announced the annual summer conference of school superintendents, supervisors and principals would be postponed because of the paralysis situation. The meeting had been scheduleld for August 21-23.

Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 13.—Twenty-five homes in Franklin County were under modified quarantine today as the result of development of a case of infantile paralysis at Mountain Lake Camp, at Fannettsburg, near here. The stricken boy is Richard Condon, jr., of Ardmore. He is in the Bryn Mawr Hospital.

Fifty-two boys and girls were enrolled at the camp.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., Aug. 13.—With the second case of infantile paralysis having been reported to the State board of health from Prince William County, all public gathering places will remain closed. Dorothy King, 16, of Wellington, is the second victim of the epidemic in this county. Both cases are reported to be mild.

Powell Recital To Inaugurate Folksong Fete

White Top Mountain Festival to Draw Musicians From Several States.

By the Associated Press.

Marion, Va., Aug. 13 (AP).—A recital by John Powell, noted Virginia composer-pianist, tomorrow night at Wytheville, will be the first of a series of musical events which will culminate in the folksong festival on White Top Mountain Friday and Saturday.

The White Top folk conference will meet at Marion College, in connection with the Southeastern Folklore Society, at 10 a. m. Thursday and continue its session through the afternoon.

A folk play will be given by the Barter Theater at Abingdon, instead of at Marion as first announced, Thursday evening.

The Powell recital, sponsored by the Helen Trinkle Music Club, of Wytheville, will include, by special request, a group of Powell's compositions based on native folk tunes which will be heard at White Top.

Twenty-five members of the Knox County, Tenn., harp singers will sing traditional model folk hymns, such as Morning Trumpet, North Salem, Warrenton and others in the Elizabethan "Fa-Sol-La" system with "lead, counter, tribble and bass." This singing is said to give a weird and beautiful effect, astonishing to those who hear it for the first time.

Champion ballad singers, fiddlers, banjoists and dancers from several States will participate in the festival on White Top.

Sen. Miller's Ticket Advanced as Joke

Marylander Not in Race for Gocernor, He says.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 13.—State Senator Ernest W. Miller, of Washington County, has wisecracked for the last time, at least in the presence of the press.

The senator was attending a conference of State senators at Ocean City last week-end when he happened to mention the fact that he was a candidate for Governor in 1938, and that State Senator Robert B. Kimble, of Allegany County, would be a candidate for Congress next fall. A Baltimore newspaperman overheard the remark and announced the Miller-Kimble ticket. gubernatorial office, or for Conploye continued tonight.

"I am nominating no one for the Gubernatorial office, or for Congress," Senator Miller said. "I feel it is time for the Republicans of Maryland to get together and if they have anything against he Governor they should go straight to him and have a heart-to-heart talk, and not do their talking through the newspapers.

"What this world needs is a sense of humor, but I've found that a man has to be careful where he does his wisecracking."

Morgan Walton Is Feted by Virginia's Bar

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 13.—Morgan Lauck Walton, veteran of the Shenandoah County Bar, at a banquet, was honored here last night on the sixtieth anniversary of his admission to the practice of law.

Brief addresses were made by Judge F. S. Tavvener, of Woodstock, who stands second to Senator Walton in years of practice among the Shenandoah County attorneys; Judge Philip Williams, of the Circuit Court of Shenandoah County; M. M. Lynch, Winchester; Senator T. Russel Cather, Winchester; Charles E. Curry, Staunton; Justice George L. Browning, of the Supreme Court of Virginia, and Clarence E. Martin, Martinsburg, former president of the American Bar Association.

Gilbert E. Pence, of the Woodstock bar, who presided, said: "This occasion probably has no parallel in the State of Virginia. I doubt if there is any other lawyer in the South who has practiced his profession for 60 years, who is still active, energetic and vigorous in the practice of law. This is an event of more than ordinary significance, and the local bar would be neglectful of its duty if it did not honor one of its members with such an unusual record in the practice of law."

Miners Union Seeks Wage Agreement

Somerset Operators Are Threatened With Strike.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., Aug. 13.—United Mine Workers officials have opened a drive against non-union operations in southern Somerset County, Pa., principally in the Meyersdale area, contiguous to the George's Creek field.

Union organizers have been engaged for a year or more in obtaining agreements from operators in the northern section of the county and activities have been transferred to the Meyersdale sector, where numerous house coal mines, in addition to several larger units, have been operating without union wage agreements.

A district representative of the union will be stationed at Meyersdale to meet representatives of all mines. It was indicated that a week or ten days will be allowed non-union operators to negotiate with the union, after which a strike will be authorized against all non-union operations.

300 Turn Out For Fire Parley At Clifton Forge

Wythe Unit Held in Line for Prize; 300 More Are Expected.

By the Associated Press.

Cilfton Forge, Va., Aug. 13.—Attendance at the Virginia State Firemen's Association convention here passed the 300 mark late this afternoon as delegates arrived from a dozen Virginia cities.

Indications tonight were that the crowd would double in size during the next 24 hours.

Though the judges have not acted, the Wythe district company is understood to be in line for the trophy offered the first company coming to the convention with 25 men from a distance of 75 miles.

At an executive committee meeting this afternoon, President Frank H. Wheeler was authorized to appoint a sub-committee to determine what course should be taken in regard to court action on the firemen's relief bill.

The executive committee recommended retaining Goode & Evans, of Richmond, to represent the firemen in any court action that might occur. The sub-committee's resolution will be presented from the floor of the convention tomorrow. The bill would tax insurance companies to raise funds for disabled firemen.

Election of officers also is scheduled for tomorrow.

A reception for the cadets and their officers was held tonight at the Officers Beach Club. Dances will be given tomorrow, Thursday and Friday nights at the same club.

Bill Is Signed With Millions For Virginia

More Not Yet Allotted Expected for State in Deficiency Act.

Measure Has $1,050,000 Earmarked to Go to Marine Barracks.

By the Associated Press.

Virginians in Congress analyzing the deficiency act yesterday after the President signed it, found several million dollars definitely earmarked for expenditure in Virginia, while more was hoped for out of sums not yet allocated.

The conference committee left the appropriation for veterans hospitals as it was when passed by the House with $750,000 for the faculty at Hampton and $900,000 for the institution at Roanoke.

The bill as signed by the President carried an appropriation of $1,050,000 for officers' quarters and other improvements at the Marine Barracks at Quantico.

Another provision in the bill appropriated $338,050 for the national advisory committee on aeronautics, which has a laboratory and plant at Hampton.

The office of Representative A. J. Montague (Democrat), Virginia, was informed last night by the Post-office Department that money was available for two additional floors in the new Richmond Parcel Post Building now under construction.

The exact cost of the two additional floors was not known at Montague's office, but he had been seeking approximately $130,000 in his search through PWA, WPA and other Federal agencies for money to raise the building two more floors to the height originally contemplated, but reduced by increased cost of building materials.

Construction of the building which had been sought for Richmond for several years was started early last spring.

The Virginians said they expected other money would go into Virginia from other appropriations carried in the bill for various departments and agencies of the Federal Government.

2 Missisippians Sought in Shooting

Bandits Wound Employe in Hotel Holdup.

By the Associated Press.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 13.—Two young men, who gave a Mississippi address as their home when they registered Sunday were sought today as suspects in an attempted robbery of the Stratford Hotel early this morning.

Shepherd Brown, Negro night clerk, was wounded twice in the neck and shoulder by the would-be robbers, who fired five shots when Brown refused to open the hotel safe at their command. He was in an undetermined condition at a hospital here.

The two young men checked out shortly before midnight last night, and were believed to have returned about 3:20 a. m. when the robbery was attempted.

British Pastor Speaks At Bible Conference

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 13 (AP).—Dr. William Erskine Blackburn, of Liverpool, pastor of the largest Presbyterian church in the British Isles, told the Massanetta Springs summer Bible conference tonight that the "greatest men who left the most abiding influence upon history were men who went out not knowing whence or whither, but only why."

"We do not accomplish much in the world by force," Dr. Blackburn said, "but we accomplish much by faith. Only as we combine our will with the will of God shall we be equipped to grapple with the colossal and staggering things of the world.

W. B. & A. Rail Service Sought By Marylanders

Hearings Set Tomorrow on Other Proposals Made to Board.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 13.—On the eve of hearings at which the Public Service Commission will determine the future mode of transportation to serve Annapolis, two owners of property along the North Shore route of the W., B. & A. electric railroad wrote the commission asking that rail service be favored.

Two bus lines and a new railroad company to operate the North Shore division have made applications for franchise. They will be given hearings tomorrow. The W. B. & A., sold recently at a receiver's sale, will cease operation August 20.

Those who asked that the railroad company be given a franchise were Frank M. Bond, of Pasadena, and Robert E. Smith, of Marley.

The applicants whose petitions for franchise will be reviewed today are the Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad, formed by the bondholders of the old Short Line Railroad, the Red Star Bus Co. and the Peninsula Transit Corporation.

The B. & A. intends to operate trains into the Camden station of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. The trains will run over the old North Shore line to Shipley, over the old B. & A. tracks to Gwynns Falls, and over 1,100 feet of new track to connect with the B. & O.

The Red Star Line now operates to the Eastern Shore via Annapolis, but is forbidden to carry passengers between Western Shore points. In its original petition for permission to carry local passengers, the line offered to serve the whole territory now served by the W. B. & A. Whether this means that it wants to establish a new bus line along the south shore line is expected to be developed tomorrow.

The Peninsula line now operates between Annapolis and Washington but is forbidden to carry passengers between Maryland points. It offers to run six round trips per day along the Defense highway if given permission to carry the local traffic.

Miller Denies Politics Govern Control of Milk

Commission Chairman Say False Conception of Group Exists.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 13.—Denying that the milk control commission "is just a political joy-ride," C. Wilbur Miller, chairman of the group, today sent a letter to all milk producers refuting a number of statements which he said were being circulated to hamper the functions of the commission.

The statements which Miller said were being circulated and which he called erroneous were:

That the commission intends to push the small producer out of business.

That the farmer will be required to improve his barns and equipment under control by the commission.

"That the commission is just a political joy-ride to milk the farmers of their hard-earned money."

In his letter Miller said the aims of the commission were to protect the farmer and guarantee him a better price for his milk. The matter of improved barns is one over which the health department and not the commission has control, he said.

Miller also denied that members of the commission were politicians, pointing out that all three were nominated by the University of Maryland. All of them, he declared, are producers of milk. Only one of them, former State Senator D. G. Harry, has ever held political office, Miller said.

Judge Pushes Jury Inquiry Of Primaries

Irregularities Alleged in Spotsylvania and Stafford Counties.

Investigation Likely in Early September, Says Coleman.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 13.—Judge Frederick W. Coleman today said he would call a special grand jury in Stafford County early in September for the purpose of investigating irregularities in the recent Stafford County Democratic primary.

Judge Coleman said he had received a number of direct complaints to the effect that the Stafford primary had been accompanied by acts that were in violation of the Virginia election laws and had heard reports of other infractions.

Judge Coleman inferred that the election in Spotsylvania County might also be investigated by a special grand jury, depending upon definite reports. Chief interest in the race centered between S. Bernard Coleman, of this city, and H. H. Walton, of Louisa, for the seat in the Senate from the Twenty-seventh Senatorial District, of which both Stafford and Spotsylvania are a part. Coleman won the nomination by 14 votes. Senator W. Worth Smith, jr., of Louisa, a supporter of Walton, has announced that he would contest the election in behalf of the defeated candidate.

The reports to Judge Coleman, it was said, do not allege any fraud in the official conduct of the election, but concern chiefly the alleged use of money by persons not connected in any way with the primary official organization.

Three Stars in Suitable Roles Register Smash

Support Also Is on Toes; About "Irish in Us;" Theater Chat.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

If "China Seas," screened yesterday afternoon for the Washington and a few of the Baltimore drama desks, is a fair sample of the new season's product concerning which Divisional Manager Carter Barron of Loew's, Inc., has been so articulate these past few days, he has every justification for the bragging—shall we call it?—he has been doing.

"China Seas" has practically everything. In particular, it has Jean Harlow in one of her raciest roles, Clark Gable in one of his best-judged delineations and Wallace Beery in a part that gives him something to get his teeth into.

In addition to this triumvirate of stars, "China Seas" boasts a supporting cast that is something to write home, or wherever it is you write to, about Lewis S. Stone, Willie Fung, Rosalind Russell, C. Aubrey Smith and a thousand, more or less, others.

But the foremost of all these is Bob Benchley. Mr. Robert Benchley, erstwhile drama editor of Life, scribbler for the New Yorker and whatnot, here emerges as a comedian of the first rank. He has done "bits" in pictures before and, now and again, has stepped out in individual short subjects, but never has he been quite so funny as in the role of the bibulous passenger aboard the boat of which Mr. Gable is captain, Miss Harlow chief menace and Mr. Beery major hazard.

Bob Takes a Drink!

Mr. Benchley has no more rightful part in the goings-on than you or I have, but he makes his interruptions of the major action extremely laughable and acquits himself, as I have said, as a comic of major stature.

There is a little bit of everything in this one to make it click with the fickle public—comedy, romance, adventure and that torrid quality that Miss Harlow imparts to any opus in which she is given a fair chance to assert a screen personality that is as foreign to her own nature as Haile Selassie is to Italy.

There is, to be sure, a typhoon on the China Sea, during the entire thunderous violence of which the boat does not rock one iota, but, aside from this slight departure from normalcy, "China Seas" may be said to be directed with fair skill by Tay Garnett.

It is marvelous, none the less, that even so stanch a craft as Mr. Gable's should weather such a storm without ever tipping off balance any more than the drawing-room of your home. If I ever have to make the trip, that is the boat upon which I shall book passage!

See Saturday's Post.

This is no time to offer a conventional review of "China Seas" and we shall not, accordingly, attempt any such thing this side of Saturday morning, but it may be said without prejudice to a Friday premiere that this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer season's inaugural may lay claim to a great diversity of those unerring qualities known colloquially as "audience appeal."

There is no point during the relation of the flamboyant narrative at which "China Seas" goes stale. It does not at any time lag and its components are such as to make for mass acclaim.

I suggest that you see it when it opens at Loew's Palace, just by way of keeping your pulse up during dog-days!

It has been just about a year since Robert Donat created a mild sensation by the excellence of his performance in the screen version of James O'Neill's perennial stage favorite, "The Count of Monte Cristo," played on the screen in its silent version by John Gilbert. Mr. Donat returns to the scene of his earlier triumph—the screen of RKO-Keith's Theater—tomorrow in a new adventure story bearing the slightly cryptic title of "The 39 Steps." Madeleine Carroll is co-starred in the role of principal feminine importance. The story pertains to a modern young adventurer who becomes entangled in the mysterious death of a woman secret agent. He also becomes entangled with Cupid, one is led to believe, when he attempts an escape handcuffed to a beautiful young woman who hates him. It all sounds very promising.

Hibernianally Speaking.

So protracted were the panegyrics heaped upon Phil Spitalny and his "Hour of Charm" orchestra at the Earle this week that perhaps full justice has not been done the screen feature, "The Irish in Us," by the boys and girls of the local press.

Mild annoyance has been expressed in some quarters because "The Irish in Us" has been described as practically pure hokum. I see no reason why this should cause any irritation whatsoever, for "The Irish in Us" is practically pure hokum.

It has been pointed out here numerous times before that "hokum" in stage parlance signifies merely those genial devices for creating laughter and sentimental interest which it has been found by frequent tests the public likes best. In the picturesque vernacular of the profession, "surefire" might almost be offered as a synonym of hokum." So "The Irish in Us" is hokum by any standard and any test.

It is concocted of those comfortably provocative ingredients that made "Abie's Irish Rose" and the "Cohens and Kelleys" screen comedies enduring favorites of the masses. The situations are made to order and built to the measure of the principals in the cast. Some of them are pretty hard to take for the strict logicians, but they are funny.

A Few of the Riots.

The "etiquette" business at the dinner table, the incidents at the firemen's ball and the silly stuff in Jimmy Cagney's corner and at the ringside during the championship fight sequences are frankly specious, but hilariously amusing. So what?

So "The Irish in Us" doesn't amount to a row of pins any more than W. C. Fields' "The Man on the Flying Trapeze," at the Fox, does a dramaturgy to be remembered five seconds after the period required for its enactment on the silver sheet.

But why must every picture shown be a dramatic thunderbolt and structurally bulletproof? These dog days are the season of the year when almost everybody peels off his coat or lets down her hair, so why not the cinema?

The "silly season" to many of us is not without merit—certainly "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" and "The Irish in Us" are not, just because they are slightly insane and in keeping with the month and its mellow mood.

Personal aside to Winnie Sheehan, former vice president in charge of production for Fox Films: When you wrote us that friendly letter on August 3, you should have said something about the item of matrimony and the charming Mme. Jeritza. Or hadn't you heard?

Well, Well, Wells.

Word from London, transmitted through the offices of United Artists, brings the news that H. G. Wells plans to abandon his regular writing planned primarily for publication and devote himself entirely to creating and adapting stories for the screen.

Wells, however, does not intend to sacrifice the advantages of library permanence of his works. An arrangement has been reached whereby each of his screen plays will be published as a magazine feature simultaneously with its release as a film, thus giving emphasis to the screen play as a literary form. This, it will be recalled, already has been done in this country in the case of the scenario for the picture "The Mighty Barnum," which was published in book form before the picture was exhibited.

At the present time, Wells is occupied with two pictures for Alexander Korda, to whom he has articled his services for a period of not less than two years. One of these is "The Man Who Could Work Miracles;" the other, "One Hundred Years From Now." United Artists will distribute them both in this country.

Whatever has become of Billie Dove, Estelle Taylor, Laura La Plante, Barbara Stanwyck, Conrad Nagel and Eleanor Holm? Not that it especially matters.

Sparks From the Parks.

I knew it would come, so here it is:

Dear Mr. Bell: "'Roberta,' RKO-Radio's picturization of the Jerome Kern stage hit, starring Irene Dunne, with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers—Miss Isabelle M. Parks to the contrary, notwithstanding—led the pack."

That's a reasonably intricate punctuation system you boast above, but I think this remark only gives me fresh cause for complaint. How many readers, casting a casual eye at this sentence, might assume that "Roberta" led at the box office despite my violent objections? Imagine my embarrassment if I were pointed out on the street as the dame who didn't like Fred Astaire in "Roberta"! Of course, I might be able to survive the accusation that "Roberta," starring Irene Dunne, left me chilly, if not cold.

Even worse, just suppose that Mr. Hardie Meakin, who, I am sure, regards every word in your column as gospel truth, were to misinterpret your statement. Just suppose that when I charge down Fifteenth street, knocking pedestrians and automobiles aside with equal ease in my haste to reach Keith's when "Top Hat" hits that theater—just suppose, that when I dash up to the box office and plunk down the price of admission, I find that Mr. Meakin has barred me from the sacred precincts that house, momentarily, the most fascinating feet in the world, because he regards me as a dangerous lunatic!

I warn you, in the event that any of these dire possibilities eventuate, I shall purchase a large supply of paper bags together with the noisiest caramels on the market, follow you from theater to theater, and practically make a lifework of rustling paper, beating on the floor with my Garboesque feet and singing in a slightly flat voice in unison with any vocal effort that may be emanating from the screen. Only one thing slows me up. I have not yet been able to figure out how I can, simultaneously, kick the back of your chair and step on your feet while passing you at a critical moment in any given movie. But give me time! I'm working on this detail, and surely my titanic intellect will find the answer. More or less cheerfully yours, (Signed)

ISABELLE M. PARKS.

P. S.—Incidentally, you have heard practically nothing until you hear Mr. Astaire sing "Dancing Cheek to Cheek." I regret to report, however, that Freddie is a little mad. He announced Saturday night that it was the first time he had "danced on air." What in the world does the man think he dances on? His feet haven't hit solid ground for at least 15 years. By the way, does "Top Hat" star Helen Broderick? I think this question should be straightened out in advance, so we'll all know where we stand. —imp.

And just when I was about to include him in that "Whatever has become of" paragraph, who should call up but old Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, of the National Theater, himself, to say that he is back in town readying the National for its fall opening—new carpet for the balcony, painting, rubber treads for the rear foyer and stairs to the balcony and like fixings-uppings against the coming of September.

Incidentally, Mr. Cochran is off again this week-end to confer with Ethel Barrymore at her home in Mamaroneck, N. Y., with reference to her forthcoming tour under his management in a revival of W. Somerset Maugham's "The Constant Wife," opening in Princeton, N. J., on October 7.

Another note of interest from the Panjandrum is to the effect that Edwina Vise, the ingenue recruited from his Clifford Brooke Academy of State Training in the Dramatic Arts, who scored decisively as a member of the National Theater Players the spring season just passed, is this week-end aimed at important conferences with Brock Pemberton, Max Gordon, Richard Pitman, agent, and others of note in the producing end of the theater, with a view to forming alliances—or at least one—that will carry her through the ensuing season professionally.

Thanks, Stevie, old kid, I thought you were dead.

Anxious Inquiry.

Was that you-all I seen out at the fight last night, or was that you-all I seen?

"Murder in the Red Barn," in the red barn!

Thus, with what our British cousins would deem the "eternal fitness of things," did the Roadside Players last evening revive again the century-old melodrama with which they established themselves as a potent unit in Washington's amateur acting groups, 13 short months ago.

With many of last year's company resuming the roles they "created," the Roadsiders again scored a signal success with the drama, the name of whose author long ago slipped into the limbo of the irretrievable, playing the stark story of sacred and profane love with all the power and force at their command.

Gail Dennis, as the wistful, innocent Maria Marten, and Eugene Kressin, as the Mephistophelean William Corder, triumphed in the principal roles of a play (said to have had its origin in English criminal fact) of great emotional content.

Comedy Relieves Tension.

The comedy romance, limned by Janet Coon and William Phillips, punctuates the sterner aspects of the drama with lighter moments which serve not to diminish, but rather to augment the heinous machinations transpiring apace.

Almost stealing the show was Harold Stepler, as the aged gypsy who seeks vengeance on the villain for an earlier seduction and murder. Close to the top in this performance's histrionic demonstrations was Thomas Cahill's careful delineation of Maria's aged father.

Others in the cast were William Milton, John Edwards, Frederick V. Rand, Harold Minor, Alton Stanford, Lorene Nelson, Margaret Osterwald. All the performers are eligible for generous praise.

Last night's performance was marred, but not irremediably, by abridging the final scene, but when Director Anton Hardt reinstates last year's version, the current production will surely top that presentation in every respect.

Watching Pictures Made

Hollywood, Aug. 13.

LAWRENCE TIBBETT is in Hollywood starting a picture career again. The name of the flicker he is now making is "Metropolitan." This day, Tibbett is playing in a scene from "Carmen." A stage and an auditorium have been constructed on the sound stage at the United Artists' studio. It is supposed to be an opera hall in Philadelphia. Not a particular opera house. Just a nice looking, big, practical one, and in Philadelphia. It is explained to me that this set is not carefully modeled after a known opera house; for then they would have to get it correct in every detail or the movie fans would write in and tell the flaws. This is the influence of movie boners. Tibbet, disguised as the toreador, walks to the center of the stage to play the scene with Alice Brady. A group of extras stand in the background, making gestures and sounds. The camera, I notice, is focused on the extras.

Tibbett and Miss Brady play their roles, but the camera is not photographing them. This is a rare occasion. The stars are merely foils for the extras, cues. Director Richard Boleslawski is photographing the actions of the mob. There are, I also notice, two cameras turning on the crowd. There are two microphones on the stage to pick up the sounds made by the extras. They are getting plenty of attention. It is not often that two cameras and two microphones are used, and I ask Director Boleslawski if he is making a double feature.

WARNERS, after trying without success to get a big name to play the lead in "Captain Blood," decided to take a big gamble and give the star role to Errol Flynn, an unknown. Errol Flynn achieved some publicity when he married Lili Damita. He is making his movie debut in the leading role in an important and expensive flicker. The first day on the set, Flynn is extremely nervous. He is too aware of his responsibility. Director Michael Curtis softens his voice, works slowly and endeavors to give Flynn every chance. Also on the set is Stanley Logan, a former stage director, who is now a dialogue director. Flynn is dressed in his pirate costume of the period and is wearing a brunette wig, the hair of which rests gently on his shoulders. All that can be said of Errol Flynn at this writing is that, with the wig on, he looks as pretty as Lili Damita.

On "The Milky Way" set, Director Leo McCarey needs a gag to top a particular sequence, and work is halted until they can get a gag. William Gargan, Adolphe Menjou and Verree Teasdale are playing in this scene. Harold Lloyd sits on the set when he isn't in a scene, and tries to help. Lloyd is one comedian who isn't afraid to give laugh lines to other members of the troupe. Practically every one on the set paces back and forth, trying to get that gag line. It goes on and on. Finally Director McCarey says he has it. He recites it. The troupe laughs. They play the scene with the new gag line. The troupe laughs after playing it. "Anyway, we like it," says Director McCarey. I wonder if it will get past the preview?

BENNY RUBIN is well known, having been a headliner in vaudeville and a star in a series of comedy shorts. But now there isn't any vaudeville to headline, and the style in comedy shorts changed, leaving Rubin, an experienced performer, without any definite career to follow. Rubin decided to use his comedy talent in another field of motion pictures. He set out to be a writer. It was difficult for him to get work in the beginning. Then finally he got a job as a dialogue writer at Warner's and did several fine jobs. As a reward, his option was not taken up. However, Columbia, because of these flickers, gave him an opportunity. He co-authored the screen version of "The Girl Friend." He is now being given the chance by that studio to become a director. He is now busy directing a short, trying to work his way up to a feature director. Since Benny Rubin became a director, every one now calls him D. W. Rubin. He dresses, looks and acts like a director.

For weeks before Rubin picked up his megaphone, he went about with Frank Capra. He wanted to learn how a genuine director acts, for he believes this is the most important thing in becoming a director. D. W. Rubin, when viewed on the set, was giving a fine performance. Rubin is a director who can go in and do certain things his actors can not do. A performer in this short gives an impersonation of Bill Robinson, but it is Rubin who will do the stair dance in the impersonation. D. W. Rubin's short is yet untitled. He doesn't know whether to call it "What Price Hotel" or "What the Hotel" or "Hotel Me Pretty Maiden."

KATHARINE HEPBURN in "ALICE ADAMS"

Interior decoration, any married man will tell you, is the art of arranging and re-arranging the furniture in the living room so that you'll bark your shins every time you come home late at night. Wives just love it, and every one is secretly confident that given the chance, she would be a marvelous success as an interior decorator. When a woman reaches that stage of efficiency where no piece of furniture is allowed to stay put for more than a week, she is supremely happy.

A complete study of the interior decoration problem has revealed two schools of thought: One with the avowed purpose to make the home comfortable, and the other, by means of cute little tables and modern bookends, to make other women say "o-oh" and "a-ah." We don't think much of the latter method, because there's never a place to drop cigarette ashes and the chairs are usually about as comfortable as a Potomac Park bench.

Sofia Freseman, however, combines both these schools of thought, and after she plans a room, husbands will like it because there are a footstool and a smoking stand handy, and wives like it because Mrs. Johnson, who lives next door, will see it and become jealous.

Miss Freseman's articles on decoration in The Washington Post each Sunday, are the Final Word on what to do with those awful vases Aunt Minnie gave you last Christmas, or how to hide the radiator pipes, or how to repaint the porch chairs. Frankly, you can't get along without her advice, whether you're planning to invest $5,000 in new furniture or 10 cents in a can of paint.

Even if you're determined to do that room over in the modern manner, she can help you. Our Sofia is, we believe, the only interior decorator living who can take those chromium-and-glass dojiggers and place them so that the room doesn't resemble a movie-set hotel bar. Her advice is so authoritative and easy to take that we get her opinion whether we plan to move a typewriter table or a waste-basket here in the office. But no matter what type of furnishings you have, or plan to have, Sofia Freseman will make your decoration problems seem simple.

After all, decorating a room is something like mixing a cocktail: The individual pieces may be all right alone, but after they're together they can be awful. Before you move that bookcase again, find out what Sofia Freseman says. Your husband will think you're a wonder and the bridge club members will be impressed. Miss Freseman answers all your problems on interior decoration . . . and you'll find her interesting, intelligent articles each Sunday in The Washington Post.

Nats Win in 10th, 4 to 3, to End Tigers' Nine-Game Streak

With Shirley Povich

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 13.—Happiest man on the Washington ball team tonight is Earl Whitehill. He is the living lie to the popular conception of a big league ball player as a young business man of certain athletic talents who is interested chiefly in the size of the bimonthly pay check. Thirteen seasons in the big leagues, through good seasons and bad, have done nothing to dampen Whitehill's unquenchable thirst for victory. Out there against the Tigers today, he drank deeply of triumph.

POVICH.

He had been cast against Al Crowder, of the Tigers, who had beaten the Nats three times this season. Detroit, owning nine straight victories, was seeking its tenth against Whitehill. To Whitehill it wasn't just another ball game. He wanted that one, he admitted before the start. "Let's go out there and give 'em fits," he shouted to his teammates as they barged onto the field.

In the news columns it is written how Whitehill won it in ten innings, 4 to 3, by limiting the Tigers to seven hits, holding them to three blows during the last seven innings, but to realize the satisfaction that his victory brought Whitehill you would have to see the man at the finish. His glee was only slightly less than wild. At dinner tonight, his hearty laughter permeated the Nats' hotel. He was pleased with himself, pleased with the team, pleased that it was he who had ended the Tigers' winning streak.

Earl Whitehill is alternately the most liked and the most disliked man on the Washington club. Let a teammate make an error behind him and woe to the unlucky fellow. Whitehill will wither him with a glower. Let the same player make a clever play and Whitehill will convey his thanks with an appreciative look. The fellow loves to win, hates to be beaten, and lucky it is for him that his teammates make allowances for it.

Out there today against the Tigers, Whitehill encountered enough discouraging developments to make a less courageous pitcher throw up the sponge. His victory was one long series of misfortunes climaxed finally by a turn in the luck, but in the face of it all he was still out there laboring with all the strength he could muster. The breaks against him helped the Tigers to no runs, but cheated the Nats of many, and as long as the score was tied he still had a chance.

Whitehill's first discouraging break occurred in the third inning, but he was a party to the consequences when he pitched Pete Fox a home-run ball with two men on. It was tough, though, when you consider that that was the only point during the game when the Detroit club had more than one man on base. And the home run had to occur then.

He saw the Nats held to only one run despite four hits in the sixth inning when Umpire Brick Owens was struck on the foot by a wild throw that prevented at least two more runs, and in the same inning he saw Cliff Bolton loaf into second base on a bunt on which Bolton could easily have made the bag if he had bestirred himself.

Whitehill saw the Nats turned back runless in the eighth inning when Second Baseman Clifton made a sensational play on his own perfect bunt, and he saw the game go into extra innings because of all of these things, when he should have had a victory in the regulation nine innings after holding the Tigers runless from the third to the finish.

And then came the happy climax in the tenth. The fellow who had been grim, glowering and growling, but never forgetting to stay in there and pitch, was a man transformed. No, he wasn't a man, either. Earl Whitehill was just a big, happy kid who wanted to win so badly that he ca nbe forgiven even if the Tigers dressing across the hall did hear his uproarious laughter. He wasn't gloating. He was just feeling good.

In Short—

Manager Mickey Cochrane laid heavy hands on Gerald Walker and all but shook him loose from his teeth after Walker returned to the bench in the tenth inning today when he was trapped off second base with the Tigers' tying run . . . Detroit fans are getting slightly alarmed at Hank Greenberg's hitting slump . . . When he went hitless against Whitehill in four times at bat it was the seventeenth consecutive time that Greenberg had failed to get a hit . . . With Whitehill clever at hiding his pitches, Greenberg did not get the benefit of signs stolen for him by Del Baker, Detroit's third base coach, who is adept at the art . . . Buck Newsom will go to the mound tomorrow for the Nats and will be opposed by Elden Auker . . . Charley Gehringer, suffering from a sprained knee, is expected to rejoin the Tiger line-up . . . Earl Whitehill, who has often expressed a dislike for Cecil Travis' play at third base, owes Travis an apology after today . . . On at least five occasions, Travis saved the game for Whitehill with super-sensational stops . . . A trade now brewing: Outfielder Fred Schulte, of the Nats, for Outfielder Gerald Walker, of the Tigers.

Jack Doyle Ready To Bet He'll Win

By the United Press.

Kingston, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Handsome Jack Doyle, Ireland's warbling heavyweight, cast off his canbling heavyweight, cast off his canary camouflage today, growled saving camp and announced to the skeptical boxing world that he will bet $10,000 he stops Buddy Baer in their "battle of crooners" on August 22.

"I'll bet every cent of my end of the purse that I stop him," declared the clouting Celt after his workout, "And my end will be about $10,000. If Buddy or any of his friends think this is an idle boast, I'd like to see the color of their money—any time between now and the night of the fight."

Tom McGovern, Doyle's manager and a wealthy sportsman, assured the gang of cauliflower correspondents that Doyle was in earnest about the wagering proposition. "We'll cover any amount up to $10,000," he said.

Welsh Loses To Mako, 6-3, 6-0

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 13.—Barney Welsh, of Washington, National Public Parks champion, was among the third round victims at the Newport Casino Tennis Tournament here today.

Gene Mako, 1934 National Intercollegiate champion, quickly eliminated the Rockville, Md., native, 6—3, 6—0. Welsh had gained the third round with two victories Monday, winning from Norcross Tilney, of South Orange, N. J., 3—6, 7—5, 6—1, and from J. H. Van Alen, Newport, 7—5, 6—0. He is paired with Jess Millman, of Los Angeles, in the doubles.

Spaniard Wins

Burly Enrique Maier, of Spain, one of the continent's outstanding tennis players, launched what promises to be a highly successful campaign at the expense of the seventh seeded player, J. Gilbert Hall, the South Orange, N. J., veteran.

He dropped the opening set to Hall, 9—7, but early in the second set discovered just where the lines were located and smashed away to a pair of 6—1 set victories that moved him into the fourth round against red-haired Don Budge, the new U. S. Davis Cup star.

Budge and Maier, along with Sam Lee and Roderick Menzel, the heavyweight Czechoslovakian star, remained in the fourth round as the top-seeded Frank X. Shields, of New York and Hollywood, led an all-star parade into the quarter-finals.

Shields played brilliant tennis to capture straight-set victories over a pair of Tennessee youngsters, Ramsey Potts, jr., and Robert "Lefty" Bryan by 6—1, 6—4 and 6—2 margins.

Grant Impressive.

Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, the tiny Atlanta star, was equally impressive, eliminating Frank A. Thompson, of St. Louis, 6—3, 6—4, and Martin Buxby, of Miami, 6—0, 6—2.

The third-seeded Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., who was runner-up to the absent Wilmer Allison here last year, coasted along to a pair of easy triumphs over G. Ramey Donovan, of New York, 6—3, 6—3, and Guy Cheng, the stylish Chinese, by 6—2, 6—2.

The others to register twice for quarter-finalist berths were Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J.; Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, another United States Davis Cup hope, and Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C.

Shields found Mangin lined against him for tomorrow's play and the draw links Parker with Mako. Hines must mark time until Budge and Maier decide their fourth-rounder, an expected thriller, and Grant, who yesterday rejected a handsome professional offer, must wait around until Menzel and Lee decide their battle for the place in the round of eight.

Budge, seeded just below Shields, was another late arrival, but he made up for lost time by polishing off two fellow Westerners, Jess Millman, of Los Angeles, 6—2, 1—6, 6—2, and Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, 6—1, 6—1.

Once the singles field is reduced to the semifinalists, probably early tomorrow afternoon, 38 teams will participate in the final dress rehearsal for next week's national doubles at Brookline.

Macks' Hitting Spree Downs St. Louis, 14-1

St. Louis, Aug. 13 (AP).—The league-trailing Browns opened their final home stand of the season by dropping the first of a four-game series with the Philadelphia Athletics, 14 to 1. Four St. Louis pitchers failed to stem the 17-hit bombardment.

A Hit That Failed to Help Tigers' Cause

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

"Jo-Jo" White, Detroit outfielder, beats out an infield hit in the third inning of yesterday's game between the league champions and Nats. He later scored, but the run later proved to be of no avail as Washington, with Earl Whitehill pitching, nosed out the Tigers, 4-3, in a 10-inning battle.

Yankees Down Indians, 8-2; Give 4 Hits

Ruffing Takes 3d in Row; Stewart Is Victim of Poor Fielding.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 13.—Sloppy fielding doomed the Cleveland Indians today as Charley Ruffing held them to four hits, the Yankees winning the first of a four-game series, 8 to 2. The Yank victory cut the lead of the Detroit Tigers, beaten today by Washington, to five games.

Walter Stewart, veteran left hander, was the victim of the Indians' sloppy fielding. Four errors helped contribute six unearned runs to the Yankee total. Stewart retired in the midst of a four-run rally with two out in the eighth, Winegarner finishing.

Ruffing pitched his third straight and eleventh victory of the season in addition to driving in two runs with a long double off the left-field wall in the eighth. Blondy Ryan's single to right scored another in the eighth after Hal Trosky threw wild on an easy putout at first on Bill Dickey's roller for what would have been the third out.

Score Three More.

Boze Berger and Sammy Hale added errors to singles by Lou Gehrig, Tony Lazzeri and Jess Hill to give the Yankees three more in the seventh. Hill's single and Red Rolfe's double scored the Yanks' first run in the sixth.

Earl Averill scored both Cleveland runs, the first on Joe Vosmik's fly after tripling in the sixth, the second in the ninth on Hale's fly after walking, and advancing to third on Vosmik's single and Trosky's infield out.

'Bama Grid Coach Enters Hospital

To Direct All-Stars From Bed in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Frank Thomas, head football coach at the University of Alabama, today entered a hospital suffering from acute arthritis in the foot bone.

Thomas, who is in Chicago heading the College All-Star coaching staff, was examined by Dr. Clifford Barborka, the physician who formerly attended the late Knute Rockne, and was advised to keep off his feet for a week.

In the absence of Thomas, Charlie Bachman, of Michigan State, will be in charge of the All-Stars, who meet the Chicago Bears of the National Professional League at Soldiers Field the night of August 29.

Bachman will carry out Thomas' orders, as the Alabama mentor plans to outline each day's work from his hospital bed.

Mrs. Moody Was Lucky, Says Perry

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Helen Jacobs will beat Helen Wills Moody if they meet in the National Women's Tennis championships, in the opinion of Fred Perry, of England, world's No. 1 player, who arrived today from England on the liner Berengaria to defend his United States singles title.

Perry, who holds the French, English and American tennis crowns, feels that Mrs. Moody was extremely lucky in her triumph over Miss Jacobs in the Wimbledon final. The faster courts at Forest Hills and the hotter climate will combine to help Miss Jacobs turn the tables on her arch rival.

Once more Perry denied he planned to turn professional this year or play in the movies. Perry's price to turn professional is $100,000, a staggering figure, and means that the English ace will not join up with Bill O'Brien's troupe.

Mum on Engagement.

As for his engagement to Helen Vinson, the American movie actress, Perry referred reporters to Miss Vinson herself, who arrives from England shortly.

Perry was reluctant to talk about Davis Cup matters, but finally said that America should not have been disappointed over its failure to win back the trophy.

"I think your captain, Joseph Wear, did the best he could under the circumstances," said Perry. "The series was really decided when Bunny Austin beat Allison in the first match. I would like to compliment Sidney Wood on his sportsmanship. Although benched, Wood acted splendid about it. Allison put up a grand battle, and played until he dropped from exhaustion."

Sees Budge Beaten.

The English champion indicated he didn't regard Don Budge, the young California red-head, as a future titleholder.

"Budge doesn't hit as hard as Ellsworth Vines," said Perry. "I can beat Budge but rarely can I beat Vines. Budge took a liking to our Wimbledon courts and that was partially responsible for his surprise showing. I think he will have to take many lickings before he reaches the peak."

Concerning the defense of his United States title, which he has held for two years, Perry merely laughed.

"Whom do I worry about most?" said Perry. "Well, when the tour-

Werber's Homer Aids in 9-5 Victory, Which Boosts Team.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—The Boston Red Sox climbed into third place in the American League by tumbling the Chicago White Sox into fourth with a 14-hit attack against John Whitehead and Jack Salveson that produced a 9-to-5 victory.

Bill Werber's twelfth home run of the season, a pair of triples and a double by Dusty Cooke and two doubles and a single by Melo Almada featured the assault.

It was the eleventh defeat of the last 13 starts for Whitehead, the rookie right-hander, who broke into the majors last spring with eight straight victories.

Great Fight Seen By Jack Dempsey

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Jack Dempsey, former world's heavyweight champion, today predicted the Joe Louis-Max Baer battle, scheduled for the late September at a site yet to be determined, "should be a great fight."

"That first punch will probably determine the winner," said Dempsey, while here with his wife and daughter en route from Los Angeles to New York. "Both are hard hitters, but of a different type. Max hooks and swings; Joe is a straight puncher. It promises to be a battle royal."

Dempsey said he believes Chicago would draw a larger crowd for the fight than New York. On September 22, 1927, Dempsey fought Gene Tunney, who later retired as undefeated heavyweight champion, in Chicago before 104,943 persons who paid $2,658,660.

Senator Asks U. S. Avoid Olympics

QUESTIONING advisability of American participation in the Olympic games in Germany next summer, Senator Peter Goelet Gerry (Democrat), of Rhode Island, yesterday warned the Senate it might result in "very bad feeling."

"I am wondering if American sportsmen should not give serious consideration to the question of whether we should participate in the Olympic games if conditions in Germany continue as they are," he told colleagues.

Gerry's statement to the Senate followed a series of protests from organizations and individuals against America's entry into next year's international sport's classic.

Win Seen Troublesome.

Said Senator Gerry:

"It seems to me, with conditions such as those which exist in Germany, with the animosities which are bound to be engendered, that it might be a serious matter, for example, if an American of Jewish extraction should win an important event in the Olympic games, or if there were some question of a dead heat involving such an American and a controversy should arise on the decision."

The Rhode Island Senator quoted headlines from a morning metropolitan paper, citing widespread "turmoil" in Nazi Germany over church issues, then read the following excerpt from the newspaper account:

"National Socialism's attacks this summer on Catholics and Protestants and the counter-offensive by the two confessions have finally forced Germany again into one of those nation-wide religious conflicts that have furnished the bitterest chapters in its sanguinary history.

News Gag Is Cited.

"The number of arrests, expulsions, counter-demonstrations and incidents of all sorts has become so great and the news suppression system is so excellent that there is no longer any question of getting an adequate picture of the religious turmoil in virtually every village and town in the Reich."

After reading the newspaper account, Gerry contented himself to only a few remarks in conclusion.

"It seems to me," he said, "with all the turmoil and with the different races and religions of the contestants competing in the Olympic games that it might result in very bad feeling."

Nats Smash Tiger Streak In 10th, 4-3

Gerald Walker Brings Down Wrath of the Crowd by Blunder.

League LeadersHadWon 9 Straight Games; Kuhel Is Star.

By Shirley Povich,
A Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 13.—To the extreme surprise, dismay and disgust of 10,000 Detroit fans, the seventh-place Nats, of all people, today brought the league-leading Tigers' nine-game winning streak to a rearing stop. It required ten innings, but at the finish it was just as conclusive as if the Tigers had defaulted at the outset.

The score was 4-3, and Elon Hogsett was the losing pitcher. He pitched Earl Whitehill's bunt into center field in the wild tenth inning to place the winning run on third base and Joe Kuhel drove it home with a single into right field.

With great effort the Tigers managed to avoid tying the score in the tenth. With the cheers of 10,000 still ringing in his ears after his pinch hit which opened the tenth inning for the Tigers, Gerald Walker brought down the wrath of the 10,000 with a piece of as dumb base running as he has exhibited since Dizzy Dean picked him off first base under similar conditions in last fall's World Series here.

With none out, Walker galloped to second base as Travis fielded Clifton's sacrifice bunt and threw him out at first base. But Walker, who is not playing regularly for the Tigers for the reason detailed here, nonchalantly loped toward third base on the play and was greatly surprised to find himself trapped between the bases by Myer's throw to Kress, Myer having covered first on the bunt. Walker was run down near third base and the Tigers, who had had the tying run on second base with none out, now had nobody on with two out.

Bats for Jo Jo.

But the Nats were not yet out of the woods as the saying goes. Representing the Tiger's last hope, Schoolboy Rowe, pinch-hitting for Jo Jo White, drove a terrific liner toward left centerfield. Red Kress then contributed the final brilliant fielding which Whitehall had been receiving all day. He leaped at least 3 feet off the ground, speared the ball with his glove and sealed the fate of the Tigers.

Before this, though, it should have been mentioned that Earl Whitehill had a lot to do with beating the Tigers. The Nats' veteran southpaw, who toiled here ten years, suffered only one lapse. That was in the third inning when he pitched a home-run ball to Pete Fox with two men on base to establish the Tigers in a 3-to-0 lead.

After that Whitehill, with the help of Third Baseman Cecil Travis, who scooped up five vicious grounders off Detroit bats to convert them into put-outs, was invincible. Over those last seven innings Whitehill permitted the Tigers only three hits, all singles. In fact, the seven hits he did allow were all singles with the exception of Fox's homer.

Washington could score only a single run to tie the count at 3 to 3 in the sixth, despite four hits. They had the ill fortune to meet up with their old nemesis, Umpire Brick Owens, who put his foot in it again,

Hole-in-One Contest Crowd Finds Green the Safest Place

By Paul Gallico,
A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The pressure on gentlemen (and ladies) trying to shoot a hole-in-one on command so to speak, must be terrific. I visited the unique contest for hole-in-one golfers now being operated at the Salisbury Country Club by New York's World-Telegram, and saw private citizens suffering apparently the same acute symptoms as must be experienced by condemned parties being led to execution.

The terrain to be traversed by the golf ball is only circa 145-yards with a nice, big, banked green to shoot at, a 10-foot circle to make it easier still and a flag sticking up out of the hole to make the shot practically a push over. And yet the victims dithered and jittered, flashed and hooked and shanked and pulled, and some of them never even got a ball up to the green in five shots. Personally, I thought the task of knocking the ball into the hole from the tee was rather a simple proposition. I was invited to try it but it seemed to me too much of a set-up to be a sporting proposition, so I declined.

At the time I left, the leader in the tourney was a Mr. Howard Searle, who was also the winner last year. Mr. Searle seem to make a hobby of winning newspaper competitions. Somewhere in his trunk he must have a pair of solid silver skates which many years ago he won in the Silver Skates Derby. Mr. Searle put his first shot 8½ inches from the cup and smacked his lips disappointingly. He said, "Tsk, tsk, tsk * * * I thought I had that aimed right square in the center of the hole. Well, anyway, I've got the range. I'll drop the next one short, bracket the hole and then sink it."

Didn't Improve.

But he did not improve on his shot that was 8 inches from the little hole, and it is doubtful whether anybody else will, either, because none of the entrants in this strange tourney seems to take the trouble to take aim when they step up between the two giant markers. There seems to be more despair than hopeful anticipation in their attitudes. When their names would be called they would step up, hit five shots, rapid-fire, and retire sheepishly and in considerable disorder.

The only thing I can derive from this rather fatalistic attitude is that these hole-in-oners have not much faith in the skill that enables them to produce their original aces. If I had ever shot a hole-in-one I should certainly remember how I had done it and would then be glad to step up to a tee any time and knock one in. They were a heterogeneous mass of golfers, these contestants—ordinary citizens most of them, some of them with rather dreadful swings, or rather twitches, but they were all distinguished by one common bond. Every one of them had made at least one hole-in-one some time or other, and some of them have as many as three or four to their credit. Therein did they definitely differ from you and from me. They had all lived through that blissful moment of seeing the ball fly from the club head, soar to the green, roll and vanish into the cup.

Occasional Good Player.

I couldn't say that this experence had done the majority of them any good. A part of the time I sat down just off the edge of the green and the shells were falling all around me. The safest place for an afternoon snooze seemed to be the green; the most dangerous spot was the grass immediately in front of the green, where topped balls made what seemed to be an impenetrable barrage.

Now and again a good player would slip up, measure his distance with his eye, take note of the wind and square up with the hole before letting fly, and the result of three or four shots on the green would re-

5,000 Watch Track Mark Shattered

Carnival Spirit Reigns; Daily Double Returns $35.50 Mutuel.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Aug. 13.—Up here where Maryland built a half-mile race track on one of the few level spots within miles and used Virginia's mountains for a background, up here where the historic Potomac River is a mere dribble, horse racing returned today. To the blare of canned music over a loud speaker, to the dull thud of hoofs, to the click of the mutuel machines, to the smell of sizzling hamburgers, 5,000 persons rallied this afternoon.

While the hotcha part of the annual Cumberland Fair, the fireworks, the potato races, etc., are not scheduled to get under way until next week, the carnival spirit reigned around the turf plant this afternoon where the hardened regulars brushed arms with those enjoying a holiday at the races.

Miniature Santa Anita.

Cumberland comes by its reputation as Maryland's best half-mile track justly. It is indeed a miniature Santa Anita. With a fence as white as a set of molars in a tooth paste ad, an infield as green and flowery as an upper Sixteenth street lawn, the Knobley Mountains, just beyond the backstretch, looming as a hugh mural painting, and a track as wide and as well groomed as Pimlico, this turf plant can hold its head high.

And Cumberland does not have to apologize for its brand of racing, either. The day's program brought all the chills and frills, favorites and long shots; close finishes and runaways which go to make hoss racing at the million-dollar tracks.

New Track Record.

And there was a feature race. It was a razzle-dazzle dash of 5 furlongs for 3-year-olds and upward and proved a distinct upset, inasmuch as Veritas, a just so-so horse, insisted on staying in front and won by a length margin over Swinlane, another whose chances were deemed slight. Third, another head away, came the favored Bread King.

And when the timers got their watches together it was disclosed that Veritas, ridden by J. Davis, had set a new track record of 56 1-5. A few moments later it was revealed that Veritas was paying an easy-to-take $16.80.

The principal racing was between the three money horses. At the half they were in this order: Bread King, Swinlane and Veritas. At the finish it was: Veritas, Swinlane and Bread King and between the two points there was a lot of hustling and bustling.

Daily doubling for the day consisted of a $35.50 mutuel on Staff Officer and Crossing Over.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUTCH, $3.70, $3.00, $2.40; CHISEL, $3.40, $2.50; PUKKA HEAVEN, $2.60.

BUTCH, hard hustled to take command in the first quarter-mile, was ridden out at the end. CHISEL made a bold bid on back stretch and was closing gamely in the home stretch. PUKKA HEAVEN, taken the overland route, should improve off this race. ROCK SPRAY quit after showing early speed.

CROSSING OVER, perfectly ridden, took command at the break to win in hand. TELL IT chased the winner throughout and had no excuses. DUNWIN should improve off this effort. THIS PLAY ran at even pace.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:03. Off at 4:08. Winner, C. Beal's b. f. VERITAS, away well, moved up fast leaving the back stretch, but was all out to win. SWINLANE broke slow, went up very fast, came wide in the stretch and closed with a rush. BREAD KING probably needed a race. PLAY BOOK appears to like a route.

CANTERET, much the best took command soon after the start to win in hand. DUNORA closed gamely from a slow beginning. SANDFALON, well up throughout, had no excuses. DEARZIN will go well when the distance is lengthened.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:26. Off at 5:27. Winner, J. A. Jogan's b. m. (5), by Hourless—Corilla. Time, 0:26, 0:50 1-5, 1:17, 1:45, 1:52 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOUBTLESS, $5.90, $3.00, $2.40; GOOD SENSE, $4.00, $2.60; BENDROMEL, $4.30.

DOUBTLESS, perfectly ridden, went into the lead passing the half-mile, saved ground throughout but was all out to win. GOOD SENSE forced the pace and closed fast the last half-mile. BENDROMEL came fast from a slow beginning. FURLED FLAG had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:56. Off at 5:56½. Winner, L. K. DARK AYR, too confidentially ridden, was allowed to drop far out of it the first three-quarters, closed with a rush on the outside to set up in final strides at stretch turn and just failed to last to win. GLENHURST showed keen race under a heavy impost. MADGES FELLOW had no excuses.

Public Works Nine Trims G.P.O., 6-3, to Win Second-Half Title

Gauzza Tops Winners' Attack

Jewett Settles Down, Holds Foe Scoreless After First.

BACKING up the effective pitching of Lefty Jewett in faultless manner after a shaky start, Public Works Administration defeated Government Printing Office, 6 to 3, yesterday on the Ellipse diamond to take the second-half title in the Departmental League.

Public Works now will engage Printing Office, first-half champions, in a three-game series for The Post Association pennant in the league, starting next week.

Young Vic Gauzza, whose hitting has been one of the big factors in PWA's second-series race, climaxed his rampage in yesterday's deciding game against the Printers with three timely bingles in four times at bat.

Jewett Hits Homer.

Jewett also contributed to the Public Works attack in no small measure with a lusty home run with two teammates on the bases in the opening inning.

Fast double plays, engineered by Jewett and Farrell in the third and Sutton and Koenig in a later inning, extricated Jewett from a couple of ticklish situations, enabling the Public Works ace moundsman to hold G. P. O. scoreless after the first inning.

Greens Are Safest During Ace Contest

pay him. But then up would step a man who would swng, there would be a sort of a brief spasm that would convulse his frame, and the ball would scatter off at right angles or go whooping into a trap to the right or left of the green, and that would be that. Those original holes-in-one must have been special acts of Providence.

And yet, I noted that when a professional, or a certain amateur, stepped to the execution block and began firing his five shots to the green, my contention of the element of luck being practically negligible when a good player makes an ace was borne out. The expert golfers were always on the green and always somewhere around the pin. Their shots were well hit in the first place, though not perfectly. To be perfectly hit, the ball must be driven on a line with the hole and figured to land in front of the hole, bounce once, roll and trickle into the cup. This is difficult to do and takes some keen anticipatory work. But if you have hit the ball well and in the proper direction, with just the right mount of power, you have a right to expect it to go on into the cup, and the right to complain of your luck when it doesn't. The trouble is, we are all too damned modest.

There is one especial benefit to be derived from this tourney for which the sponsors should be thanked, especially by the wives and friends of hole-in-one golfers. It is shutting a lot of them up. Upon their return from the competition, when in answer to the question, "Well, dear, how did you do? Did you get another hole in one?" they are forced to reply, "I hit shots and didn't even hit the green," it is bound to have a salutory effect.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 13.—Capt. Buddy Myer, doughty little second baseman of the Nats, today climaxed his sensational drive toward the batting leadership of the American League when he wrested the lead from Joe Vosmik, Cleveland outfielder.

With three hits in four times at bat against Detroit pitching Myer raised his average from .343 to .347 to top Vosmik, who dropped to .346 when he was able to make only one hit in four times at bat against Charley Ruffing of the Yankees in New York.

After walking in his first time at bat and flying to center field in his second appearance today, Myer made three straight hits to lift himself into the league lead. In succession he singled into center field, beat out a bunt and beat out a hit to Second Baseman Clifton.

Good Runner.

His speed afoot and bunting ability have played no small part in Myer's climb to the top. He has made 13 hits in his last 17 appearances at bat and six of them have been infield hits. In three of his last four games he has bunted safely at least once.

Myer this season is reaching his greatest batting form. His previous high batting mark in the 11 years he had been in the big leagues is .313. Always known as a clever and dangerous hitter, Myer is at his best.

With men on bases, Myer has proven himself the Nats' most dangerous hitter, his bat has produced more runs than that of any other Nat and his ability to get what the ball players call "a piece of the ball" has boosted his total of runs driven in. Only his ability to get on base frequently has kept him out of the clean-up hitting role with the Nats this season.

Culpeper Scores Over Weavers, 9-2

Culpeper, Va., Aug. 13.—Culpeper Athletic Club continued its winning streak in the Valley League by defeating the Albemarle Weavers, who accepted the Heurich Brewers franchise, in a game here this afternoon, by the score of 9 to 2. Two hits, combined with two errors, gave the visitors their only runs in the first inning. "Lefty" McIntyre was on the mound for the locals and let the foe down with three singles, while his teammates made eight hits count for 9 runs against Dennis, on the mound for the visitors.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 13.—Ten teams were definitely in tonight for the first annual Virginia sime-pro and amateur baseball championship, to be played here starting August 31, and a dozen other teams have until next Monday mignight, the Richmond Athletic Board said tonight.

It is proposed to start the tournament with double-headers at both Mayo Island and the stadium here on Saturday and Sunday, August 31 and September 1, cutting the field from 16 to 8 on one week-end.

Any amateur (defined as any person who has not played professional baseball during 1935) may play provided he played one game with his team prior to midnight August 12.

Dave Miller, a member of the committee, will go to Harrisonburg and Front Royal to explain some details of the tournament. He went to Norfolk Friday to talk to the teams there.

Billy Dettweiler 3 Under Par With a 69

Performance Augers Well for His Chances in Amateur Trials.

By Dave Herman,

BILLY DETTWEILER, 17-year-old Congressional Country Club golf star, turned in one of the lowest rounds ever recorded by an amateur at his home course yesterday when he shot a 69, three under par.

Dettweiler toured the outward nine in 35, two under par, and maintained the even tenor of his brilliant playon the back side to score a 34.

This sub-par performance, marking the first time the young star had ever cracked 70 over the long and difficult Congressional layout, augurs well for Dettweiler's chances in the National Amateur sectional trials next Tuesday at Indian Spring Country Club. He will play his first practice round over the Iidian Spring course tomorrow along with a flock of other District stars seeking places in the Middle Atlantic event.

Over par on only one hole, the gourth, where he missed a short putt, Dettweiler, scored birdies on the fifth, sixth, eighth and twelfth.

Shea Shoots a 73.

Playing with him were Billy Shea, jr., who will compete in the amateur trials, and Troy Carmichoel. Shea shot a 73. Carmichael had a 38 on the back nine.

Dettweiler already has qualified three times for the National Amateur, making the grade first in 1932 as a kid of 14, being the youngest participant in the big championship at Five Farms. He went to the second round at Brookline last season.

Sandlotters Provide Big League Action

Rain halted the contest at the end of the seventh inning. These rivals clash again today on the South Ellipse at 5 o'clock.

The 1,200 sandlot fans, who dared the weather man to watch yesterday's battle saw the Brewers snatch the game out of the fire with a 5-run batting orgy in the fourth. Oertel, Knight and Russell led the Heurich's batting assault.

"Watch her," said Perry. "She's good."

Perry, who was a trifle ill from eating too much fish, will remain in New York a few days and then go to Canada to play a few exhibition matches to help him round into condition for the United States championships. After the Forest Hills tournament he will go to Australia to go to work for a sporting goods company.

a resolution from 30 representatives of the "American Youth Congress," urging nonparticipation by this country in the 1936 Olympics and requesting the A. A. U. not to certify athletes for the games in Berlin.

The resolution charged Germany with inflicting "persecutions and discriminations not only upon Jews but also upon labor organizations, Catholics, Protestants, Negroes and other so-called non-Aryans, thus abrogating all pledges and promises of the Hitler government to the American Olympic committee."

Mahoney, who is on record as personally opposed to sending an American Olympic team to Germany, accepted the document, but declined to discuss it.

9 Trotters Vie In $33,000 Race Today

Greyhound Is 1-2 Choice; More Than 40,000 to Watch Classic.

By the Associated Press.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Aug. 13.—The characters for light harness horse racing's most spectacular drama were cast today when nine 3-year-old trotters, the leaders in their class, were picked to play the principal roles in the tenth staging of the Hambletonian at Goodtime Park tomorrow.

More than 40,000 lovers of horses, gathered from city and farm, are expected to pack the rambling racing theater set among the Ramapo Mountains on the outskirts of this village of 3,500. The weather man has promised perfect racing conditions for the $33,000 show, the sport's richest event.

Reserved Seats Sold.

With every reserved seat long since sold and bleacher seats expected to be filled hours before Starter Steve Phillips calls the trotters out at 2 p. m. (E. S. T.) for the first of the two-in-three heats, Bill Cane, maestro of the great event, has planned to place 5,000 chairs in the infield to handle the overflow.

As for the show, which figures to break all records not only in attendance, but time, Greyhound, a sleek gray colt owned by E. J. Baker, of St. Charles, Ill., is the 1-to-2 favorite to steal the spotlight and win the purse of $18,670. His daddy, Guy Abbey, was forced to take a back seat in 1928, finishing second to Spencer, but horsemen and laymen alike today settled on the unbeaten flier as the one to beat.

Unbeaten in Four Starts.

With Sep Palin, Indianapolis veteran, handling the reins, Greyhound has not been defeated in four starts this year and as a juvenile chalked up seven victories in ten starts. He stepped a mile in 2:02¼ at Toronto, faster time than was ever registered by a Hambletonian winner and exceeded only once in the rich stake and that by Hollyrood Dennis, which won one heat in 1932 in 2:01¼.

If the colors of Greyhound are lowered, however, two colts and a filly figure as the ones to turn the trick. Of the trio, Lawrence Hanover purchased out of the Old Glory auction sales as yearling for $6,800, rates the highest. Carrying the silks of the LaSalle Stable, of Chicago, owned by L. B. and L. D. Sheppard and C. N. Myers, the bay son of Peter Volo will be driven by the Urbana, Ohio, master reinsman, Hugh M. Parshall.

and stifled a promising Washington rally.

Heinie Manush beat out a bunt to Greenberg to open the sixth, and Travis singled to center. But when Centerfielder White threw to third in an effort to head off Manush, the ball bounded past Third Baseman Owens and Travis, watching the play, started for second. The bouncing ball, however, struck Umpire Owens on the foot, bounded back into Third Baseman Owen's hands and Travis was trapped and run down at first base.

Cost Nats Two Runs.

Thus, Owens cost the Nats at least one more run. A press box wag said that it probably cost Washington two runs. It, as he said, the ball had struck Owens on the head instead of on the foot, it would have bounded over the fence and both Manush and Travis would have scored.

Red Kress finally drove Manush home with the tying run with a single into center. When Bolton also singled, Crowder was withdrawn and Hogsett halted the uprising.

Thus the game wore into the tenth, the Nats threatening in every inning and the Tigers meekly submitting to Whitehill. Hogsett walked Kress to open the tenth but the situation was eased for him when Bolton hit into a force play. Manager Bucky Harris sent the fleet Dee Miles in to run for Bolton and was immediately rewarded.

Whitehill laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt and Hogsett foolishly attempted to head off the speedy Miles at second. His throw went into center field and Miles scrambled to his feet and dashed into third. When Centerfielder White's return throw to the infield caromed past third, Whitehill took second, but Miles held his base.

Then Joe Kuhel won the ball game for the Nats. He drove a liner into right, Fox slipped in chasing the ball, caught it in a sitting position and then dropped it, Miles scoring from third.

Gerald Walker's base-running took care of everything for the Nats in the Tigers' half of the tenth.

"Out Fishin'" ⌐ ⌐

By Jack Hawley.

THE influx of anglers from Washington and nearby suburbs to Point Lookout and Ridge, Md. (St Jeromes Creek), starting points for S. W. Middles fishing grounds famous for bluefish, has reached such volume that boatmen are finding it difficult to fill all demands for reservations.

This writer has sent numerous parties to the Middles since last Friday evening and more are going each day. All are returning with outstanding reports of their success and the urge to return again this week. Be sure to make your reservations far enough in advance to allow the boatman to either take care of your party himself or make other arrangements to get you a safe and serviceable boat.

This writer answered 39 phone calls yesterday with 34 asking for phone numbers, direction by route or tackle and lures required to enable them to secure bluefish. For convenience the following list of reliable boatmen is given:

Taft Tippett, Ridge, Md. Phone Great Mills 13-F-12.

Blues Running.

The big run of blues is now on. The white feathered lure is by far the best to use, according to information received since last Friday. Don't depend too much on your line if it is of last year's vintage because the blues are breaking up the best of them. Most of this is caused by the angler keeping the tension too tight at the time of the strike. Do not tighten your star drag to its capacity, but only enough to pull slightly at first, gradually tightening it as you play your fish. A bluefish never gives up fighting, not even after he is in the boat. Let the boatman handle him.

Mr. Harry Randall with Mrs. Randall, and Mrs. Robert Beachey spent the week-end with Mrs. Lynch Freeman, of Ridge, Md. The party landed several very large blues on S. W. Middles, the smallest fish weighing 4 pounds and the largest tipped the scales at an even 9 pounds. It measured 30 inches in length.

Fishing continues to be excellent at Solomons Island. Large trout, blues and croakers are being taken regularly. The writer sees no reason why other places in the bay and its tidal waters should be other than very good for the next few weeks. Chesapeake Beach continues to be good for rock fishing. With a continued good break in the weather very few anglers will be left in town this week-end.

Harry M. Weber, Le Ross Brown, Col. H. T. Woodward, of Roanoke, Va., in company with J. J. Sheehan, of this city, landed a 21½-pound skate and sighted four more between Plum Point and Chesapeake Beach Sunday. This is news because Mr. Sheehan landed the skate on a 4½-ounce casting rod after a hard 35-minute fight. In addition, they landed several trout and the usual run of croakers.

Braves Can't Win '35 Pennant, Alert Mathematician Figures

PROLONGED argument as to whether it is possible for the Boston Braves to win the pennant disrupted the usual placidity of The Post sports department last night.

"Of course they can," said a typewriter pounder. "They're just 40 games behind the Giants and both teams have 49 games to play. If they win all 49 and the Giants do the reverse, why, they'll be 9 games ahead."

"But how about the other six teams?" said another alleged worker, "All of them can't lose. While the Giants are in this proposed slump, St. Louis and Chicago and the rest will still be keeping ahead of Boston."

The Post mathematician put an end to the discussion. He pointed out that the so-called ball team has now a record of 27 triumphs to 78 defeats.

"Now, if they win all 49 remaining contests," he said, the final standing will be: won, 76; lost 78, for a percentage of . . . er . . . well, anyhow, below .500. The total of won games in the league must at all times equal the total of lost games. Therefore, at least one team, any old team, must be ahead of the Braves at the finish.

So it seems Boston is doomed to second place in the National League.

Loop Kills Earl Mack's Plans To Take Squad on Mexico Trip

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 13.—Earl Mack, Mack, son of Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics, said today American League club owners had denied him permission to take players of that league on an exhibition trip to Mexico after the close of the regular season this year.

Mack, a coach for the Athletics, said he previously had received sanction from President William Harridge but that the club owners, meeting in Cleveland, had agreed not to let their players make the trip. He was notified of the ban by President Harridge.

Expressing a hope the owners would reconsider, Mack said players have signed contracts for the trip, have pooled about $800 and with the money have sent a representative to Mexico to arrange the tour.

Frederick Nine Is 7-3 Victor In League

Wins Over Middletown; Damascus Is Routed by Brunswick.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 13.—Frederick defeated Middletown, 7 to 3; Brunswick ran away with Damascus, 15 to 1; Wakefield set back Jefferson, 9 to 8; Walkerville nosed out Mount Airy, 11 to 10; Church Hill took the measure of New Market, 13 to 6, and Cedar Grove turned back Point of Rocks, 9 to 7, in the Frederick-Carroll-Montgomery county circuit. Brunswick and Frederick continued on even terms for first place in the second-half pennant race, with Middletown, runner-up, one game behind.

In the Frederick-Middletown set-to Kline held the Valleyites to five hits, three of which came in the first inning and counted for two runs. He then settled down and allowed only seven men to reach first base. Frederick took the lead in the sixth inning when singles by Kline and Lirschman, two errors, two walks and a scarifice counted for four runs. Three singles, an error and walk gave Frederick two more in the seventh frame.

Four Runs in First.

Brunswick clinched the game with Damascus in the first inning when singles by Walker and Gosnell, a walk, error and double by Mahone yielded four runs. Carey held Damascus to six hits, while the Railroaders bombarded Buxton and Crouse for 15, including three triples and three doubles.

Eddie Hyde's home run in the sixth frame with the bases loaded won for Wakeville in its tilt with Jefferson.

Am. Tel. & Tel. At 142 Reaches Four-Year Top

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—Heavy public investment buying forced prices higher on the stock exchange again today. Expected profit-taking sales were limited and traders gave up trying to forecast when the upward surge will reach a ceiling.

The utility average today hit a new high since February 23, 1934, at 27.47, while the industrial group—a group that underwent considerable profit taking and switching—nosed into a new peak since 1931. The railroad average gained. Trading volume was 2,360,000 shares, slightly under yesterday's total, but marking the first time since July, 1934, that there have been two days in which trading exceeded the 2,000,000-share rate.

This happened without a solitary important factor. American Telephone & Telegraph is an example. It rose to a new peak since 1931 at 142, an advance of 4¼ points for the day. At that level it showed a dollar appreciation of $79,314,669 for the day, based on the more than 18,000,000 shares outstanding. Brokers reported the reason for buying this stock:

"Cash buying by American investors and foreign investment. They feel at the current rate of dividend—$9 a share—the stock is a worthy investment at the time places of investment are slight. They also feel the dividend rate is assured for the time being even if earnings do fail to cover it. In addition they believe the investigation scheduled in Washington will do the company very little harm and reveal nothing to the public that is not already known."

In the days of the speculative markets that information would not have meant ⅛ point to a stock. But in an investment market such as prevails today, that feeling generates buying that sends stocks to new peaks. Consequently professionals who move for quick turns are at a loss. They feel a reaction must correct the heavy price structure.

Store Sales Up 14% in July Over Last Year

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reports the dollar value of department store sales in July as 14 per cent greater than for July last year.

Simultaneously, it found aggregate sales for seven months of 1935 were 3 per cent greater than during the corresponding 1934 period.

All Federal Reserve districts reported department store sales gains for July. They ranged from an 8 per cent increase in Boston to 18 per cent in Atlanta and San Francisco. For the seven-month period, however, Boston and New York showed respective losses of 2 and 1 per cent, while no change was reported by Philadelphia.

The board's seasonally adjusted index of sales remained unchanged in July as compared with the previous month, at 80 per cent of the 1923-25 average.

The table shows percentages of change from a year ago, by reserve districts, as announced by the board:

Cutting Tire Price Admitted By GoodyearCo

Clayton Act Violation Is Charged by Trade Commission.

By the Associated Press.

A price discrimination of $7,985,440, or 4.46 per cent on the selling price of tires sold to Sears-Roebuck & Co., was admitted in a brief filed with the Federal Trade Commission yesterday by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

The Trade Commission has sought to show that through alleged price discrimination, Goodyear is cutting competition in sale of tires and tubes between other manufacturers and between Sears-Roebuck & Co. and other competing retail tire dealers, including those selling Goodyear products.

Bar Silver Off To 67⅜ Cents

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—Imported bar silver in New York was reduced three-eighths of a cent an ounce to 67⅜ cents today, the first cut in the metal in about a month.

The decline followed the lowering of prices in London and Montreal and reports that the Treasury had withdrawn buying orders for the time being. The domestic price, which represents the Treasury's purchasing level, remained at 77 cents an ounce.

Far Eastern silver currencies were heavy in sympathy with the easing of world prices for the metal. The Hongkong dollar last 1.10 cents and Shanghai funds were off about one-quarter of a cent.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

Total Issues	885	887

Stocks — Despite profit-taking pressure the market eased into new high ground with sales only slightly below the record total of the previous session. Turnover was 2,367,540 shares.

Bonds—Corporates made little headway with stronger issues leaning backward and secondary rails furnishing the only firm spots. Communication loans were especially active with small price changes.

Curb — Scattered profit-taking did not stem the upward course of prices or diminish activity. Trading for the day totaled 583,000 shares, a new record for the year.

Grains—Persistent selling, partially induced by a bearish interpretation of the Canadian government report, depressed wheat 1 cent a bushel. Corn and oats were off in sympathy. September wheat last at 86½, corn final at 74¾.

Cotton—Reports of favorable crop weather in the South gave impetus to the selling and prices were 14 to 15 points lower. October closed at 10.93.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.16 and refined the same at 5.10 for the fine granulated.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Service

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Aug. 13.—Dollars were a little easier against most European currencies and commodities weakened, but stocks and bonds (outside Government issues) moved forward in active trading. Stocks were interesting only in the public utility division at the start, but the extraordinary buying in that group and a late pick-up in the railroad shares awakened new interest in other groups. Best prices were reached in the last hour, with numerous advances of 1 to 3 or 4 points on a turnover of close to 2,500,000 shares.

A decrease of $79,000,000 in holdings of Government direct obligations, reflecting in part payment of consols maturing August 1, was the principal change in the statements of member banks in 91 cities reporting to the Federal Reserve Board as of August 7. Partially to offset this loss of earning assets, the banks purchased $20,000,000 more of guaranteed obligations and $9,000,000 other securities and $7,000,000 of commercial paper and bills. Their commercial and miscellaneous loans rose $13,000,000. Most of the increases in loans and in holdings of Government guaranteed securities, and most of the drop in Government direct obligations occurred in this district. Security loans were $14,000,000.

Net demand deposits dropped $62,000,000, but time deposits increased $22,000,000 Though reserves were down $6,000,000, excess reserves were higher, largely because of the shrinkage in demand deposits. Total excess funds on August 7 were $1,932,000,000, compared with $1,921,000,000 in the week before. In New York there was a further big bulge in surplus funds, the total rising from $1,092,000,000 an $1,114,000,000 on the heels of a $62,000,000 increase in the preceding week.

Chicago banks' excess reserves went down for the second week in succession, the decrease being from $271,000,000 to $262,000,000.

Investment Shift.

While the rise in commercial borrowing and in loans on securities points toward greater activity in business and in expanding speculation in the stock market, the evidence still is too slight to make a case either for a market boom or pronounced trade activity this autumn. This is the season when a good deal of commercial borrowing ought to take place. More hasn't been seen because corporations are well heeled with cash and because they have been cautious in borrowing new money where needed and would-be lenders have been equally cautious in advancing new capital.

New financing activity has been confined largely to refunding issues, which also goes a long way to explain the boomlet in the stock market. Refunding since the early spring runs into the billions, including Treasury operations. Much of the money thereby released undoubtedly has gone into the new issues offered to take up the old—at lower rates of interest. Much of it has not, and the answer is the stock market. If only 5 or 10 per cent of the money released from refunding had shifted into stocks as an investment, the rise in prices easily could have been accounted for, without much reference to improving earnings.

It is difficult to lay down rules whereby stock prices can be balanced against company earnings, but the percentage of rise in the last three months certainly has exceeded the percentage of earnings gain. Allowing part of the remainder to discount of autumn business improvement, much must still be credited to investment for return and price appreciation over a long period. Until recently at least the stock market (with due regard for a moderate amount of speculative hocus-pocus and jugglery) has been largely an investment affair. It could change rapidly into a speculative boom.

Utilities Lead.

Elimination from the tax bill of the provisions for putting some of the burden on lower incomes and of greatly increasing the yield from taxes did not seem to affect the markets greatly. It didn't require much guessing to know that no set of New Deal congressmen, or old dealers either, for that matter, is going to strain to make a large class of voters realize what the New Deal costs. Even the New Dealers might go in for higher taxes some time, but this is not the year for it.

Favoring Weather Cuts Cotton Price

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—Cotton was lower today under selling promoted by reports of favorable weather in the South and easy Liverpool cables. Prices made new low ground for the movement, with December selling off to 10.76. Net declines of 14 to 18 points were the rule at the end. While by no means heavy, hedging was a little more active and pressure otherwise seemed largely attributable to selling or liquidation on the expectation of increased offerings as the picking season advances.

Bull Market Hastens SEC Regulations

Definite Interpretation of "Pool" Section Is Seen.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

A strong possibility that the Securities and Exchange Commission will hasten formulation of definite regulations covering manipulation and pool activity was forecast in well informed brokerage circles last night.

At the same time it was revealed that the officials of the Federal agency both here and in New York have been on guard to apprehend any violations of the securities act carried on under cover of the present bull market.

Ticker rooms now in operation at the commission headquarters here and in New York are used by S. E. C. attaches to scan the tape for evidences of unnatural pressure or buoyancy in certain issues.

Full extent of the precautionary measures taken could not be definitely ascertained as officials here refused to answer questions relating to the subject. The only reply that could be elicited was that the matter had been under study for some months but that no public announcement would be made at this time.

Information on whether additional men had been assigned to the work as a result of the increased market activity also was refused.

Difficulty of enforcing the security act provisions covering manipulation and juggling until definite enforcement regulations were made has been admitted by S. E. C. officials for some time.

Building Forges Ahead.

Forging steadily ahead in a contraseasonal upward movement, building operations in July for the seventh consecutive month recorded a gain over the corresponding month of a year ago, as well as an increase over the immediately preceding period.

Permits issued for July in 215 leading cities of the country involved estimated expenditures of $54,158,182, according to the compilation made by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

This was the largest total rolled up in any month since November, 1931, and compared with $52,677,369 in June, making a gain over that month of 2.8 per cent and, as compared with $33,899,650 for July a year ago, a gain of 59.8 per cent.

Finance District.

Mr. Clarence A. Aspinwall, president of the Security Storage Co., has left on the Ile de France for a visit to the European office of the Security Storage Co., in Paris.

Charles Carroll Morgan, one of the managers of the Washington office of G. M. P. Murphy & Co., is spending his vacation at Niagara Falls and a fishing trip in Canada.

B. & O. Loads Off.

Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the month of July totaled 158,292, of which 104,473 were loaded on line and 53,819 received from connections. For the month of July, 1934, total loadings were 169,181, of which 113,690 were loaded on line and 55,491 received from connections. The previous month of June, 1935, showed a total of 175,080 cars, 115,552 being loaded on line and 59,528 received from connections.

For the week ended August 3, B. & O. loadings totaled 38,211, of which 25,305 were loaded on line and 12,906 received from connections. The same week in 1934 showed a total of 39,012 cars, of which 25,615 were loaded on line and 13,397 received from connections.

During the previous week (the week ended July 27) total carloadings were 38,787, of which 26,108 were loaded on line and 12,679 received from connections.

Treasury Offering 2.8 Times Overbid

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that the tenders for $50,000,000 of 273-day Treasury bills, dated August 14, which were offered on August 9, were opened at the Federal Reserve banks on August 12. General Foods Protests High Corporate Tax Burden Would Fall Upon Small Stockholders, Says Francis.

New York, Aug. 13.—General Foods Corporation, in a letter to stockholders dated today and signed by Clarence Francis, executive vice president, protests the corporate net income tax legislation now in process and asks the cooperation of stockholders in opposing it. In the letter Mr. Francis says:

"I feel that it is my duty to you, as owners of this company, to call your attention to threatened legislation which would be harmful to your interests. I refer to the proposal of the Administration at Washington that the corporate net income tax, now imposed at the uniform rate of 13¾ per cent, be replaced by a tax imposed at rates graduated according to the amount of income.

"In a recent message to Congress, the President suggested rates ranging from 10¾ per cent to 16¾ per cent. The Treasury Department thereafter submitted to a committee of the House of Representatives estimates of revenue from this source based on rates ranging from 10 per cent to 17½ per cent. According to these schedules, income in excess of $1,000,000 would be taxed at rates of 17 per cent to 17½ per cent.

"This is part of a tax proposal which in its nature is entirely new in this country. Its novelty lies in the fact that its avowed primary purpose is not to raise revenue for the Government, but to redistribute the wealth or property and income of private persons. This is an indirect effect, perhaps, of existing and proposed graduated taxes upon individual income, but there could be no clumsier or more futile means of accomplishing such a purpose than a graduated tax on corporation income, for such a tax is an indiscriminate burden on the income of all stockholders whether they be wealthy, well-to-do, or comparatively poor. The income of the corporation is the income of all its stockholders, and it is they who bear the burden of any discriminatory tax upon that income.

"Not only would such a tax distribute the meager income of a small investor in an illogical and misdirected effort to distribute the income of the large investor, but the small investors are the ones who would collectively bear the greater burden. This company, for example, is owned by 61,000 stockholders, men and women, more than 85 per cent of whom own fewer than 100 shares each, the average number of shares held by each stockholder being under 90.

"Should a tax be imposed on corporate incomes at rates graduated from 10 per cent to 17½ per cent, as suggested and discussed in the House Committee, you, as stockholders, would be subjected to an increase of from 15 per cent to 22 per cent in the Federal income tax burden of the company before net profits available for dividends, while the stockholders of a small corporation, even though individually wealthy, would get the benefit of a decreased burden."

Selling Pressure Cuts Wheat 1 Cent

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Wheat prices gave way stubbornly today under persistent selling pressure and another loss of a cent a bushel was recorded.

Hedging sales and mild liquidation partly induced by bearish interpretation of the Canadian government's crop report more than offset the light buying power that appeared in the pit.

At the close wheat was ¾ to 1⅛ cents below the previous finish, December, 88¾@88⅞, and corn was ⅝ off to ½ up, December, 55⅜@55½. Oats lost ⅞@1 cent; rye, ¾@1¼, and barley was 1@1½ down.

The Federal Diary

By Loren Hall,

Batting for Morgan Baker.

ANOTHER boost was given the annual and sick leave bills yesterday, when the Senate Civil Service Committee reported them out, unanimously recommending their passage. Members present included Chairman Bulow and Senators White, Gibson, Byrd, Logan, George and Neely, the latter voting by proxy.

The bills are now ready for action by the Senate and early passage by that body is predicted on Capitol Hill.

Commenting on the committee's action, E. Claude Babcock, president, A. F. G. E., said:

"The Senate Civil Service Committee has made only a few minor changes in the leave bills as they were enacted by the House, and we are much gratified by its action. We believe that passage of the leave bills is more desired than any other feature of Government employe legislation, and we are appreciative and grateful for the consideration these bills have been given in both houses of Congress.

"The Senate committee, like the House committee, reported the bills unanimously, and we sincerely hope that the Senate will act to bring to a realization the hopes of the Government employes and their many friends, in and out of Congress, who have favored the progress of these bills."

Supporting a movement to establish a transfer bureau to take care of Government workers dropped from Federal units which are reducing personnel, the inter-lodge committee for Government transfer has discussed the matter with Budget Director Bell, who is studying the proposition. Bell said he "felt sure there would be a decision on the matter soon." He also explained that he is in favor of not bringing any new Government employes here until all former Federal workers are given jobs.

WHO CAN DO IT?

DO WHAT?

"Fix that roof. Every rainstorm means work for me and more stains on the ceiling in our bedroom."

Well, my dear, that's simple. If you'll just turn to the classified section of your morning Post you will find your very question "Who Can Do It?" in big, bold type, and right under it the names of some roofers. Then all you have to do is use the phone—simple?

ARE YOU SUPERSTITIOUS?

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Wedding Plans — By Harry J. Tuthill

George! What a scare. Saying you are married. Happily, as Madge pointed out, that was away back in 1935.
Well this time thing is terribly mixed up for me, and....
Suppose, your Highness, that George and I walk in the gardens while I explain?
Madge... Miss Secretary of State.. if there's any explaining to do to my fiance, I'm sure I can....
Your fiance? Oh your Highness, you're already engaged to the Mogul of Mexico. And simply insane about his plan to unite South and North America.
That was yesterday. Today I'm.... Madge, I have an idea..... you marry the Mogul.
You tried to make a fuss over him too, every time he came to see me. It was easy to see you were just wild about him and....
Perhaps.... a week or so ago. But now.... No, Chloe, I can't marry that Mogul.

Discovering America
With Maxine Davis

Spirit of Kansas Triumphing in Face of Drought, Dust and Shortage of Farm Labor.

I like Kansas. It's a grim State, grim with a pioneer stubbornness.

"How can you stay out here and try to make a go of it?" I asked a farmer near Syracuse, in the extreme western end of the State, who stood regarding his corn grown tall, and so dry yesterday that even if rain came today it wouldn't be good enough for feed.

"What's the matter with it?" he demanded fiercely. "All we need is little rain."

I refrained from asking Mrs. Fay Brown that question. I knew better when she showed me a dusty brood of assorted chickens and announced:

"Them chickens are giving us our chance."

I met Mrs. Brown near Dodge City. She's one of 80 families at work on an RFC housing development. I bumped out to see it, and was lost in admiration at their courage. Eighty families, all young people, were finishing building their own homes; little box-like white houses under a burning sun, without even a promise of a friendly shade tree.

Their owners contributed 70 per cent of the labor, and they'll pay the balance of the cash outlay and the money for the land over a long period of years. There's a garden plot with each, from 3 to 5 acres, irrigated, and planted, and here and there looking, well, not precisely lush but nutritious.

Living in Chicken House.

Like most of her neighbors, Mrs. Brown's house wasn't finished. So she and her husband and their two children were living in the chicken house. That is, the chickens lived in one side, the Browns in the other. Mrs. Brown turned down the fire under the plums she was canning to show me about. You'd love Mrs. Brown. Somehow, you'd trust the Nation to her sort. Rather tall, and very lean, with bright blue eyes in her brown, pointed face, and hands that can run a sewing machine or a trowel with equal skill. She added the chickens to the subsistence garden and her husband's occasional trucking.

She felt, I guess, like a proud mother hen toward those unsightly birds, most of them in the unlovely molting stage. "Right after I got them chicks, it rained," she said. "It rained three weeks. I didn't have no brooder. So I just filled fruit jars with hot water, and they crowded around them jars. That's how we kept the chickens." And she wants the home demonstration lady to hurry up out and show her how to can peas so they'll keep, before hers ripen.

Somehow, the picture of Fay Brown, keeping her chickens in spite of three weeks of rain, and her garden in spite of imminent drought, and her family fed and healthy, was a grand sight to me.

But Kansas is better off this year than it was last. There's some wheat, and if any rain comes at all, there'll be corn. The oats are in great shape.

People are beginning to buy land again. That's almost unheard of these past several years. They're buying smaller farms, too, which may signify the end of the mammoth, unwieldy wheat farms. The grass is coming back in part of the State and in the eastern part of Kansas pasturage is renting at $14 a head. Last year it went for only $4 a head.

This doesn't mean that Kansas has snared prosperity. It hasn't. You can see that as you pass farm after farm, with houses and buildings a paintless drab and with the sunlight sifting through the walls on the tractors and combines. In about a third of the State there's no wheat crop at all. The wheat just blew away. In another third the wheat was ruined by black rust. Last spring the northwestern section had the worst floods in most people's lifetime, so they couldn't cultivate the corn properly. And they're still not sure about the crop.

No Money for Labor.

The farmers have almost no money to pay labor and men find the relief wages so much higher in some places that they won't consider work. One can scarcely blame them. Often all the farmers can offer is 25 or 50 cents a day. So, in the old pioneer fashion, one hears, the land owners get together and help each other out.

But at that, they're getting something valuable for the relief money. All over the State the KERA is building fine lakes to conserve the water. And already it has finished over 300 farm ponds, which will save the cattle from the tragedy of last year's drought.

If it wasn't for the various Government loans and payments, many of the farmers would be on relief rolls themselves. But they're not precisely grateful. They take it as their just due, and grumble. No news in that!

I wondered if Huey Long and Father Coughlin had made any impression on them, over the radio. That was easy. They haven't. Kansas farmers haven't been listening on the radio until this year. For a couple of years before that, they couldn't afford to keep up their batteries!

I asked if they'd vote for President Roosevelt in 1936. "Well," the answer was frequently the same, "we got to see what the Republicans got to say."

Banjo Broken at Party, Tiff Ends in Shooting

10,000 Public Enemies

By Courtney Ryley Cooper.

Sentimental Murderer—Part 2.

After Dillinger's escape from Crown Point, he immediately went to Chicago and looked up his woman, Evelyn Frechette, who, at this time, had not been arrested. They next met with some good friends from St. Paul, Eddie and Bess Green, hang-overs from the Frank Nash-Verne Miller-Keating and Holden-Barker-Karpis gangs. Eddie was an enthusiastic soul. He knew Dillinger in the days shortly after his parole in the spring of 1933. Having taken part in bank robberies with nearly every other gang on the map, he now formed the link by which Dillinger and Hamilton became forces in a new coalition.

Some history must intervene. Years ago, a tough, boastful, cruel little boy played around the packing-house district of Chicago. In every game he wanted to be the crook, and his extreme joy came when he could play at "shooting cops." His name was Lester Gillis. It was not long before the police were warning him that he was under suspicion for petty thefts in the neighborhood.

This only made the boy more boastful. He joined a crowd of toughs that went in for stealing automobiles, driving them for a few hours and abandoning them. About this time Lester Gillis achieved two things. He gained the name of Baby Face, and he became girl crazy. Whereupon he began selling the cars he stole that he might gain the reputation of being a free spender. He was caught and sentenced to the St. Charles School for Boys.

From there he was paroled, a clemency for which he was twice returned on charges of violation. At last, free of the reformatory, he got a job as a truck driver, which he quit to become a gunman. He now became known as George (Baby Face) Nelson. His first job was the robbery of a bank at Spring Grove, Ill., followed by another at Hillside and still a third at Itasca, both cities in Illinois. For the Hillside robbery he was sentenced to from one year to life, and while in Joliet Penitentiary he failed in an attempt to escape. That was about 1931. A year later he was taken to Itasca for trial and was sentenced to from 1 to 20 years. On the way back to prison he got away and was not retaken.

Shortly after this Nelson went West, where he engaged in bootlegging around Sausalito, Calif., and where, among other persons, he met a bootlegger named John Paul Chase. He also met many other bootleggers and criminals, finally to become affiliated with the notorious Joe Parente crowd, operating from San Francisco all the way to Reno, Nev. Finally he headed East again.

In October, 1933, about the time Dillinger was being rescued by his pals, Baby Face and a gang robbed a bank at Brainerd, Minn.,—a job, by the way, of which Verne Miller was suspected. Then, with his crowd, Nelson went to San Antonio, Tex., to cool off. His gang at this time consisted of Thomas Leonard Carroll, paroled from Iowa; Homer Van Meter, and Charles Fisher, now a prisoner in Leavenworth Penitentiary on a mail-robbery charge. All had their women.

Charles Fisher was picked up by the police of San Antonio. One of the remainder of the gang killed a policeman. So, things being hot, all but Fisher, who was in jail, started for Chicago, where the gang split temporarily. Finally Homer Van Meter and Marie Comforti went to Minneapolis, where they rented an apartment. One night they visited a friend's place, where they met and reminisced with Jean Delaney.

This host was Pat Reilly and he was making money far more easily then when he was wont to drive a carload of liquor all the way from St. Paul to South Dakota for $25. Pat got commissions on hot money. Or he would assist in a hurried getaway for a consideration, and had become generally an all-around go-between.

However, he did not know everyone in the bank robbery business; reaching for the heights, he was still on the fringe. Eddie Green and Bess were more fortunate. Dillinger escaped from Crown Point, Indiana, on March 3, 1934. On March 6 he, with Hamilton, Van Meter, Carroll, Eddie Green and Baby Face Nelson, robbed the Securities National Bank of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., obtaining $49,500. This was fast action for a man who had been out of jail only three days. Bank robberies these days are not haphazard affairs. Preparations sometimes consume one or more weeks.

A week after the Sioux Falls robbery, Pat Reilly sat in a St. Paul restaurant eating a midnight meal. Eddie Green entered and slid into a chair opposite.

"Listen, Pat," he asked, "where's that doctor live, the one who treated your kid when he fell off his bicycle and bit his tongue in two? I got a couple of friends outside with some bullet holes in 'em."
